HARDING WAKES SMILING

FIGHTS PNEUMONIA

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, July 31.—President Harding was so far refreshed by a sleep which lasted more than six hours last night that he said this morning he felt able to look at the news of the day, He glanced at the front pages of papers which were held before him. It was said that an informal statement as to the President's condition would be given out within an hour or two.

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Cal., July 31.—President Harding was still asleep at 6:15 o'clock this morning (10:00 Boston time), according to word from the presidential suite to the anxious watchers outside. He had had more than six hours sleep at that time and was continuing to rest easily, it was said. Members of his party expressed warm satisfaction that he had been able to obtain so much rest.

At 5:25 A. M. Lieutenant Commander Joel T. Boon, the physician who had been on duty with the President all night, emerged from the sick room and went to his own apartment for a brief rest. He made no comment on the condition of the patient, but wore a noticeably more cheerful air than for some hours past.

From midnight on, the quiet of the Presidential suite was broken only by the visits of Lieutenant Commander Boone. Each visit was the same, a quiet opening of the door, a brief stay inside, and an equally quiet closing of the portal.

San Francisco, July 30.—An alarming turn in the condition of President Harding was indicated when several tanks of oxygen for emergency use were taken to his apartment. It was announced that the development of an X-ray photo of the right lung showed "definite central patches of broncho pneumonia have developed in the right lung as indicated clinically and by the X-ray."

Nourishment is being taken regularly and the abdominal symptoms are less noticeable. While his condition is grave he is temperamentally well adapted to making a strong fight against the infection. "Pulse temperature and respiration are about the same as shown in the previous report."

San Francisco, July 31 (I.N.S.)—Everything is in readiness here today for a battle to save the life of President Harding.

Pneumonia, the dread foe of all physicians where a patient's powers of resistence have been diminished, has developed in the President's right lung and this is considered the most alarming single factor in his case.

A very great deal depends, his physicians said today, upon whether this inflammation of the lung is held in check.

It is the pneumatic condition, and not the abdominal symptoms resulting from ptomaine poisoning, that held the attention of physicians throughout the night, on the eighth floor of the Palace Hotel.

BULLETIN

PRESIDENT HAD "BEST NIGHT"

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, July 31 (By Associated Press).—President Harding passed the "best night, comparatively, since he has been ill," Brigadier-General Sawyer, his personal physician, said in a statement at 8 o'clock this morning (noon Boston time). "That augurs well. The conditions seem to warrant the statement that apparently he has gotten into clear sailing." General Sawyer confined his announcement to this brief statement after a consultation with other attending physicians. The President took some nourishment this morning and read the newspapers.

Harding Making Struggle in Which Life Is at Stake

Presidential Headquarters, Palace Hotel, San Francisco, July 31 (AP)—President Harding, characteristically calm and determined, is fighting the greatest battle of his career—a struggle in which his life is the stake.

Arraigned against him are broncho-pneumonia, symptoms of which were discovered by the attending physicians late last night, and also the danger of other complications. Arrayed in his favor are his calm determination, a subsidence of the earlier abdominal trouble and the hopes and prayers of a nation. His handicap is an admittedly weakened physical resistance.

The 9:15 bulletin, issued after a consultation of the five physicians attending the President, contained the first announcement that broncho-pneumonia had developed in the right lung, although a statement given out four hours previously had spoken of "evidence of some congestion in one lung." It also conveyed the first authoritative information that his condition had turned from "serious" to "grave."

The bulletin also contained rays of hope, for it said that "nourishment is being taken regularly and the abdominal symptoms are less noticeable" and that the Chief Executive is "temperamentally well, adapted to make a strong fight against the infection." Another favorable statement was that his temperature was remaining about constant at 101 degrees, even though his pulse continued at about 125, as compared with his normal of 80 and his respiration was about 44.

The broncho-pneumonia symptoms described in the bulletin as "definite central patches," were discovered both clinically and by the X-ray which was used yesterday afternoon and continued to be used during the night.

N. H. OFFICIAL KILLED BY HYDE PARK TRUCK

Elmer H. Morse, sixty years old, assistant superintendent of the Boston division of the New Haven railroad, was so badly hurt when struck by an automobile early today he died on the way to the City Hospital. He was crossing Centre street at Burroughs street when struck by a truck driven by Sam Chefits of No. 8 Davidson street, Hyde Park.

Chevitz was arrested charged with manslaughter. A police ambulance took Morse to the hospital. He lived at No. 37 Elliot street, Jamaica Plain.

4 WOMEN HURT AT NAHANT AS CAB AN AUTO COLLIDE

Four women were injured when an automobile crashed into a horse-drawn cab today at Wilson and Nahant roads, Nahant. The auto was driven by Mrs. Mary F. Glennon of No. 273 Castle road, Nahant. Three other women were in the car—Mrs. Glennon's mother, Mrs. Ellen F. Jennings of Somerville, and Mrs. Sarah Weston and Mrs. Frank Caffrey of Nahant. The carriage was driven by James Egan, coachman for Ellison James of Nahant.

Mrs. Glennon was driving behind Egan when he suddenly turned into the side road. She jammed her brakes, the sedan skidding and sideswiping in carrime. The carriage was wrecked and the auto turned over.

MEANEST THUGS ROB DOCTOR

Call Him to "Dying Child," Then Beat Him Up in East Boston

Dr. David Bloom was called from his bed at No. 33 Princeton street, East Boston, at midnight.

"Hurry, doctor, a child is dying at No. 80 Orleans street," said a male voice on the telephone.

The physician dressed and motored to the address. He saw a light in an upper window. Hurrying into the house he was intercepted in the hall, choked and beaten and robbed of $80. Michael Silbo heard the noise from the top floor and hurried to the physician's assistance. The thieves had fled. East Boston police who are investigating branded the thieves "the meanest ever heard of."

"Get them," was a captain's command.

BOY PIRATE ROBS YACHTS OF RICH

North Shore Girls Write Him Love Notes, and He Loots to Entertain Them

A pirate bold, like those of old, is Howard Edward Smith. He hoisted his Jolly Roger and roved the "Northern Main" in a stolen canoe and pillaged the yachts of the Summer residents so he could gratify the whims of a dozen loves in a dozen towns.

In the wake of his pirate craft he left a trail of broken hearts and angry parents, according to the police of Manchester-by-the-Sea, who captured this modern "love buccaneer" today when he was driven to Singing Beach by a heavy sea.

A confession of robbery, obtained by Chief George R. Dean of the Manchester police disclosed the many and hectic romances of the twenty-year-old Captain Kidd as well as a cache of stolen articles on Kettle Cove Island.

A thick pack of the amorous outpourings of girls in Boston, Cambridge, Revere, Lynn, Salem, Peabody and Beverly were found in the centre of the collection of loot from the yachts of North Shore residents at his room on Lynde street, Salem.

But the girls were expensive, especially some of them who had a penchant for liquor, which is how Howard came to take up pirating as a means of procuring the necessary "jack" to entertain.

Every yacht that looked expensive was a Spanish galleon to him and he raided without favor. One of his first thefts was a repeating rifle, which was in the canoe when he was arrested. Then he took everything moveable from the boats, even to the bronze letters on the stern of one launch.

THUGS BEAT AND ROB MILKMAN IN ROXBURY

Louis Wingersky, driver for the Sterling Farm Milk Company, reported to the police that while he was bending to deposit a bottle of milk in the doorway on Pine Grove terrace, Roxbury, two men suddenly appeared. One struck him in the back with a blunt instrument and the other relieved him of $6 in money.

MRS. HARDING AIDS DOCTORS IN FIGHT TO SAVE PRESIDENT'S LIFE

CHIEF EXECUTIVE'S STRENGTH AT LOW EBB; NOTED SPECIALIST MAY BE CALLED IN CASE

San Francisco, July 31.—The physicians attending President Harding were vitally concerned today in building up the President's shattered strength for a fight against the pneumonia infection which has set in as an added complication to the case.

They found considerable satisfaction in the fact that their patient was able during the long night to partake of some nourishment and to get an appreciable amount of refreshing sleep.

Oxygen tanks were held ready for immediate use if needed.

The President went to sleep about midnight, and early this morning was still sleeping, with the doctors and attendants moving quietly about the eighth floor corridors and hoping against hope that the morning examination would reveal no extension of the lung infection.

MAY CALL NOTED DOCTOR.

It was reported early this morning that Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., one of the most noted surgeons in the United States has been summoned to San Francisco to stand by for a possible operation should the need for one develop as the result of the pneumonia development.

Great travel, and exertion of his physician to be temperamentally well-fitted for a battle against pneumonia, but less well adapted from a purely physical standpoint.

The drainage of resistive powers by the long days and nights of consistent travel, and exertion of his history-making trip, has been pronounced, and in the final analysis, they say, it is the capacity to resist diseases that determines battles of this character.

Ordinarily, the President's great natural strength and vigor could be counted upon to put up a great fight against the advances of inflammation of the lungs.

HAS USED UP STRENGTH

However, in the present case, this great natural reservoir of strength has been subjected to constant strain by exertion of traveling and speaking for forty days and nights by the digestive disturbances which formed the starting point in his serious illness, and by the strain upon his heart that was commented upon in the last bulletin issued by his physicians.

"In the President's condition, anything can happen," said Dr. Charles E. Sawyer, chief of the attending physicians.

"The President's resistance is low. He has expended his natural powers, as revealed by his inability to speedily throw off the poisons taken into his system.

"Happily, however, the lung usually is capable of resisting disease."

It was a quiet but nevertheless tense night around the President's quarters in the Palace Hotel. The development of lung infection was a severe blow to the physicians, who had been hopeful that the compilication would not be added to their other enemies of weakness, heart strain and digestive disorders.

MRS. HARDING OPTIMISTIC.

Mrs. Harding was about the President's room until after midnight. Then she retired to her own room to obtain sleep.

Her cheerful demeanor and unfailing optimism did much to relieve the obvious concern of the physicians after the discovery made on the X-ray plates. Her confidence in the President's complete recovery is unshaken.

Dr. Sawyer was loud in praise of the manner in which Mrs. Harding is standing the ordeal of the President's illness.

"She is one of those creatures," he said, "that is best under fire."

Dr. Joel T. Boone, Jr., medical officer of the White House and holder of the Congressional medal of honor, won as chief surgeon of the famous marine brigade at Chateau Thierry, was on duty in the Presidential suite all night.

During the early hours of the morning the President slept and Dr. Boone contented himself with regular forensics inspections to make sure of the patient's continued rest.

DAUGHERTY ON THE WAY.

Dr. Sawyer was in and out of the President's quarters several times during the night, but he had little to add to the last regular bulletin issued last night. He found considerable satisfaction, however, in the President's sleeping.

Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, close personal friend and adviser of President Harding, today is hastening to the bedside of the stricken chief from Seattle.

Daugherty had planned to join the Presidential party for its trip through the Panama Canal and when that was cancelled arranged to return to Washington immediately.

Immediately upon his arrival in Seattle last night he received first news of the seriousness of the President's condition. After telephonic communication with members of the President's party at San Francisco, he announced he would proceed southward as speedily as possible.

Condition of President Dr. Sawyer Explains Exact

San Francisco, July 31.—In making the statement that the President's condition is serious, Dr. Sawyer took pains to explain just what he meant by this term. He said:

"I say the condition is serious, but not grave. When we say 'grave' we indicate our belief that the patient may not survive. I use the word 'serious' in the sense that it may become dangerous. We only know that we have found the signal up indicating that complications arising from the poison are increasing and tending to affect other organs of the body."

Dr. Sawyer explained the condition of the right lung, which was developed in yesterday afternoon's examination as being "oedematous," which means an exudation of serum into the tissue. He added that the swollen condition of the President's lips, which were noted at the beginning of his illness, was similar in origin and was caused by the exudation of serum into the lip tissue.

Mrs. of the President became desperately ill and hovered for days at the point of death with her husband in close attendance upon her. The devotion of President McKinley to his stricken wife in those days was no more touching than that of Mrs. Harding today as she sat by the President's side administering words of comfort and encouragement to him as he fought against the illness with which he is stricken.

There is no question that the President overdid himself in his efforts to please those who met him at various stops in the United States and in Alaska and that this together with the variety of food to which he was unaccustomed were mainly responsible for his breakdown.

None of the physicians have been able thus far to place any time limit on the President's stay in San Francisco. The general opinion among them is that at least ten days will be required before he can think of leaving his bed and preparing for his return to Washington.

San Francisco Is Gloomy Under Dress of Gay Colors

San Francisco, July 31.—San Francisco, taken unawares by the unexpected coming of President Harding, burst forth today with all the gaiety of decoration that had been planned in honor of the nation's executive.

Almost at the same time the city's crowds, turned from their normal vivacity by graver news from the President's sick room, took on an unwonted air of concern.

Up Market street, the city's principal thoroughfare, great national banners hung from standards on either side, framing the view in patriotic colors. Through this array streamed crowds which paused before the President's hotel, halted before newspaper offices to read the latest bulletins regarding the executive's condition, or broke up into small knots in which but one subject was discussed—the President's health.

Buildings blossomed out with bunting and decorative effects, the centre of many of which was the gold seal on a blue ground, emblematic of the presidential flag; ferries on the bay flung out their ensigns, and street cars carried flags.

All these signs of festivity made a sad contrast with the deep regret evident everywhere that illness had overtaken the President. This regret was outdone by only one thing—the eagerness of everyone to do whatever might be done to give aid and comfort to the President in his fight.

Telegrams of sympathy literally poured into the presidential headquarters, keeping a staff of clerks busy sorting and answering them. Baskets of fruit, hugs bouquets and other gifts that might serve to cheer the sick room or be of interest to the patient, arrived in such profusion that they overflowed the presidential rooms, and the corridor had to be turned into a veritable bower of California blossoms.

Harding First Showed Strain While in Seattle

Seattle, Wash., July 31—Followers of President Harding's Seattle speech Friday noticed he was hurrying through his prepared address. Frequently the President rushed by periods, when brief pauses probably would have brought applause from the gathering.

In spite of his illness the President arranged, immediately after his address, to make the previously cancelled trip to the Childrens Orthopaedic Hospital.

During the long drive up Queen Anne Hill, however, it was noticed Mrs. Harding was doing most of the bowing in greeting the knots of people gathered along the route.

At the hospital, President Harding did not leave the car, but, after a brief stop, speeded on toward the press club.

Mrs. Harding, the audience at the stadium noticed, was watching the President closely during his address. Her concern at the time was set down to interest in the manner in which the vast crowd would receive the critical address on Alaskan problems.

Britain Stirred by Harding's Illness

London, July 31 (I.N.S.)—The Daily Chronicle, personal organ of former Premier Lloyd George, devoted its leading editorial today to President Harding, hoping for his early return to good health.

President Harding's illness is attracting widespread attention in the press in official circles and among the public at large. It is linked with reparations and the German crisis in British public interest.

King George Will Send Message of Sympathy

London, July 31 (I.N.S.)—King George is deeply concerned over President Harding's illness, it was officially stated this afternoon. The King will send a message of sympathy and hope for improved health as soon as he receives news of Mr. Harding's sickness through official channels.

Pope and Italian King Regret Illness

Rome, July 31.—King Victor Emmanuel and Pope Pius, when informed of President Harding's grave condition, expressed deep regret and voiced wishes that the President have a speedy recovery. The King, who is summering at Pinchiano, has requested that he be kept in touch with the latest developments of the President's illness. The Pope has also requested the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Gasparri, to communicate to him all available news on the President's condition.

WIFE PLAYS ROLE OF NURSE FOR HARDING

PRESIDENT AND MRS. HARDING

COOLIDGE READY TO LEAVE FOR CAPITAL

Plymouth, Vt., July 31.—Vice-President Coolidge, resting here at his father's home, expressed deep sympathy for President Harding and voiced an earnest hope that the President's recovery be rapid. He was ready to leave at a moment's notice for Washington.

"I have just sent the President a message of sympathy," he said, "and I am anxiously awaiting word of his condition."

The Vice President issued the following statement:

"It is very evident President Harding has worn himself down very much as Mrs. Harding did in the service of the American people," said Vice President Coolidge tonight. "It is my opinion that he is the best friend our country has. It is no wonder that every one was disturbed to hear of his illness and is rejoicing at the prospects of his recovery.

"He has never spared himself, but has been constant in the most earnest efforts to perform the duties of his office even to the minutest detail. It is this painstaking effort that is apparently the main cause of his illness."

Coolidge's ancestral home, where he is now staying with his aged father, lies high up in the wilds of the Green Mountains. Plymouth Notch, the town which saw his birth on July 4, 1872, rises up, rugged, gaunt and splendidly isolated from the surrounding hills.

Ludlow is the nearest town, thirteen miles to the south. It has a railroad station, telegraph office, moving picture house and a hotel. There is only one way to reach Plymouth—and that is over a nearly steep 800 to 900-foot rise in a 13-mile ride or walk.

Operation Foreseen By Doctors' Bulletin

By Universal Service.

Washington, July 31.—A surgeon described by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming as better qualified than any other in Washington to interpret intelligently the bulletins issued by President Harding's physicians, asserted that indications point toward acute inflammation of the gall bladder, possibly necessitating an operation. He said:

"The symptoms described in this bulletin early Monday) point to an acute inflammatory condition. Since the lungs and peritoneal cavity are reported free and the digestive disturbances are localized in the gall bladder region, it is very suggestive of acute inflammation of the gall bladder itself, in other words of acute cholecystitis.

"While this disease may have some effect on overstrain on the cardiovascular system, the present acute illness is centered in the acute infection, probably of the gall bladder, though the symptoms fortunately may subside, it is possible that surgical interference may prove necessary."

Fake Death Report Adjourns Supreme Court

Reports that President Harding had died caused the adjournment of a hearing before Elias Field, as master in the Supreme Court.

The hearing, which was resumed, was on the petition of Leroy H. Sweeney, former principal of the Revere Senior high school, and William J. Pollard, Jr., former assistant principal of the Revere Senior high school, who allege that they were demoted to the rank of teachers through politics, and seek reinstatement.

Connecticut Sends Sympathy to Harding

Hartford, Ct., July 31.—Governor Temple sent a telegram to President Harding as follows:

"The people of the State of Connecticut tender their warmest sympathy to their beloved President. Their hearts go out to you and Mrs. Harding in a wealth of affection, and their earnest prayers will be offered Almighty God for your speedy recovery."

News of President Broadcast by The American

The Boston American's broadcast of hourly reports of President Harding's condition through Station WNAC, the Shepard stores, which was begun yesterday, will be continued today.

Reports as received at the Boston American office will be telephoned to Shepard's. To get these latest bulletins tune to 373 meters, on the hour.

Radio fans throughout the country offered a silent prayer for the President's recovery at request of Dr. Robert C. Murphy of the American Museum of Natural History, broadcasting from WEAF.

How American Leads all in News of Harding

Right now the eyes of the nation are fixed on a sickbed in San Francisco, where the President of the United States lies critically ill.

The progress made in the fight to save Mr. Hardings life represents the event of paramount importance to the nation.

In Boston the public knows that the latest and most reliable bulletins are printed in the Boston American. The front page reproductions shown herewith are self-explanatory.

The Traveler stated that a "bulletin was expected from the bedside of the stricken President." The Globe said the President's condition was "critical but not serious."

At the same moment the American was on the street with the only official bulletin issued from the bedside yesterday with the news that was reflected in the newspapers of this morning.

The American printed the news—"President's Condition Acute."

The Boston American of Saturday was the only source of news to Boston that the President had been poisoned by food.

Harding's Danger in Low Resistance, Says Dr. Graves

"If President Harding is suffering from diabetes, high blood pressure and bronchi-pneumonia, in addition, his chances of recovery are extremely doubtful. In such a case, the President unquestionably is in grave danger."

Thus was the opinion expressed today by Dr. Roger C. Graves, noted Boston specialist. There may be no crisis, Dr. Graves added, in bronchopneumonia, but the President's general condition would afford him very little resistance to the disease.

That President Harding has been suffering from high blood pressure and kidney complications for some time, and that his condition has been a constant source of worry to his physicians, was asserted today by a government official close to the President.

Outdoor exercises, golf especially, has been insisted upon for the President by General Sawyer, for some time. The President's apparent fondness for golf is said to have caused much adverse comment among uninformed persons. Mr. Harding, on that account, refrained many times from playing when his physicians considered it absolutely necessary.

The President is known to have refused to play on several occasions since he began his western tour.

Dr. L. Marshall Crosby, of Beacon street:

"High blood pressure, or kidney disease, in itself, would be sufficient to give President Harding's physician worry, without the acquiring of broncho-pneumonia.

"Either of these conditions would tend to cause considerable strain on the heart and the heart must be in good condition to withstand pneumonia. The President appears to be in great danger, indeed."

Dr. W. B. Batchelder, Washington street, Dorchester, said:

"When a man has passed middle age bronchial-pneumonia is a serious affliction. Vitality is lower then, of course, than in a younger man. I would hesitate to say what the President's chances are. I do not think it would be wise.

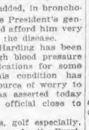
"Of course if the President has a high blood pressure and is troubled with sugar in the kidneys, that might have some effect on the situation, depending on the cause of the high blood pressure."

Cardinal O'Connell Sends Sympathy to Mrs. Harding

Cardinal O'Connell today sent the following telegram to Mrs. Harding:

"We are deeply grieved because of the illness of our beloved President, and our priests and religious and the children of our schools are offering their prayers for his speedy recovery.

"We are also praying God to give you strength to bear your burden cheerfully, which we trust Providence will soon lighten."



Cardinal O'Connell.

Bar Planes While Harding Is in San Francisco

San Francisco, Cal., July 31.—No airplanes will be permitted to fly over San Francisco while President Harding remains here.

An order prohibiting private planes from passing over the city was issued today by Police Chief O'Brien, as a result of a conference with secret service officers here.

DEMAND EXTRA SESSION TO DEAL WITH WHEAT

Minneapolis, Minn., July 31.—President Harding was urged to call an extra session of Congress with out delay to deal with agricultural problems affecting the nation, at a conference of four Northwestern Senators here.

The session was attended by Senators Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, and Senator-elect Magnus Johnson and Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota.

The telegram, signed by each, was sent to the President at San Francisco, with the request that it be "delivered when the President's health permits."

No agreement was reached on plans for stabilizing the wheat price. Senators Brookhart and Frazier are in accord on Brookhart's plan to fix the price on the entire crop, raise the tariff in order that no wheat may be purchased from the outside, sell what the domestic markets will consume, and have the government take over the balance at the fixed price.

President's Illness Causes Break in Stock Market

New York, July 31.—Official reports that President Harding's condition was grave brought a large volume of selling orders into today's stock market, and caused a break of 1 to 2 points in U. S. Steel, Studebaker, Baldwin and other speculative leaders.

Commission houses reported that much of the liquidation came from small investors, who had become frightened by the turn for the worse in the President's illness.

Army, navy and postal airplanes are confined by regulation to certain definite areas of the waterfront or near the landing fields on the outskirts of the Metropolitan area.

The President's Illness
Two Birthdays
New War—New Horror
Just Like a Woman

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company

THE news of President Harding was disquieting yesterday. Four physicians called in consultation declined at first to issue a bulletin.

The President is said to suffer from intestinal poisoning after eating crabs supposed to have absorbed "copper salt" from the water and mud in which they lived.

The President, compelled to abandon his tour, will return East at the earliest possible moment. His excellent constitution, based on careful living, will carry him safely through what has undoubtedly been a severe test of his resisting power.

TWO human beings far apart mentally and geographically have just celebrated their birthdays—Henry Ford, aged sixty, and Mussolini, aged forty.

Henry Ford was born on a farm and worked there until he was twenty-four. Now he is worth at least a thousand millions. If he lives ten years and saves, he'll have three billions. You can start late and succeed, if you have it in you.

MUSSOLINI had an exciting birthday; Henry Ford's was dull compared to Mussolini's. There were 30,000 telegraphic messages of congratulation and praise for the fighting Italian. Whether Ford's or Mussolini's name will live longer, history will tell.

THE BRITISH have a cruiser of 3,600 tons, able to sink out of sight at the approach of a dangerous enemy, then rise, when the enemy vanishes, and go on cruising in search of commercial victims. That is one interesting new thing in war.

THE UNITED STATES is manufacturing very small seaplanes to be carried inside of submarines.

The submarine will rise to the surface and the planes will fly off carrying TNT or gas bombs to attack enemy ships or coast towns.

THE COMING war will be something new, something to make the seven plagues of Egypt look like a pleasure party. Think of half a dozen gigantic submarines, suddenly rising at the enemy's coast line, each using a big gun and releasing a flock of miniature flighting, death-carrying flying machines.

THAT KIND of thing will end war eventually. The old colored man told his amazed clergyman that he didn't believe in eternal hell fire, "because I don't think no constitution could stand it." No national constitution could stand the kind of war that science is preparing.

A YOUNG WOMAN of Detroit, Louise Billet, inherited $100,000. First she had her hair bobbed, frizzed and "touched up a little."

Men will say, "Just like a woman." True, and this, also, is just like a woman, but at all like a man. Miss Billet bought an electric washing machine and announced her intention to do washing free, for invalids, and for women poor and sick. She knew what it was to wash for wages and thought it would be interesting, especially with an electric washer and wringer, to wash for poor people for nothing.

Many men will inherit a hundred thousand dollars before you will find one with such a "crazy idea" as that.

WALL STREET was uncomfortable yesterday. First everything dropped, and those horrible "new lows" came out. Then conditions got a little better. Nobody seems to know what is the matter, or what is to happen. This country has everything it needs, and some things not absolutely necessary, including most of the gold.

It ought to be a healthy country, but it isn't quite sure about it. The average man in an insane asylum or in a hospital begins to feel crazy or sick for a while. Surrounded on all sides by nations in trouble, we pinch ourselves once in a while, but can't be quite sure that we are awake, and well and happy.

CHARLES A. VIALLE, HUB BROKER, DEAD

Charles A. Vialle, a former vice-president of the National Shawmut Bank, died early today following an acute attack of indigestion.

Charles A. Vialle

Mr. Vialle was stricken yesterday in his office, and was taken to the Relief Station. Later he was transferred to the Phillips House, where he died.

He was serving as a director of the National Shawmut Bank at the time of his death. He was also a director of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company and the Reversible Collar Company.

SEXTON BEATEN IN WINCHESTER GANG FIGHT

Arthur Trainor, twenty-four years old, a sexton of the Congregational Church in Winchester, was severely manhandled in a gang fight in Winchester square early today. Police say a fight between the two Winchester cliques had been brewing for several months.

Trainor and about fifteen companions were on their way home from Le Duc's restaurant. As they passed the Central Garage, of which Charles Brunnell, a private detective, is manager, they charge that Brunnell struck Trainor on the forehead with a monkey-wrench and knocked him unconscious.

Trainor's party then attacked Brunnell and his five companions. The Brunnell men fled when they saw a squad of police coming in an automobile.

Brunnell's friends say the fight started when Trainor kicked a can of gasoline in front of the garage. Trainor was picked up by the police and taken to the police station for first aid treatment. He was later taken to the Winchester Hospital. He will recover.

Police are searching for Brunnell. Trainor declared he will swear out a warrant for Brunnell's arrest on a charge of assault and battery.

TOWN TREASURER TAKEN FOR THEFT

Deputy Marshal James Fraser, of Boston

Joseph Dubuc, of Quebec

Joseph Dubuc, former treasurer of the town of Thetford Mines, Quebec, was arrested today by Deputy United States Marshal James Fraser of Boston at Worcester for the larceny of $14,000 from the town.

Dubuc was for years one of the leading figures of the community and a pillar of his parish church.

Because of his position as president of an internationally known asbestos company having mines in the town, he was rated as wealthy, and he was held out to young men as a shining example of success due to hard work and perseverance.

He fled a year ago this past April and since then a search has been pressed which led to all parts of this country and Canada.

Acting on information he had dug up in Boston, Marshal Fraser went to Worcester and early today located Dubuc.

According to Worcester police, who accompanied the deputy marshal, Dubuc confessed his guilt. He claims his father is now making restitution on an instalment basis.

MRS. RYAN'S MESSAGES BY RADIO

"Eternal Courage" Burden of Alleged Calls of Maxwell to Rich Wife

New York, July 31.—The messages which are said to have been exchanged between "Poison Pen" Maxwell and Mrs. Allan A. Ryan cover a period extending from October 3, 1922 to March 12, 1923. Many of them are in French. Numerous of the messages are addressed to "Lewxam," which is said to be Maxwell's cable name, and which is his own name, minus the final "L" spelled backward.

SENT FROM SHIPS.

They are from the steamship Reliance and also from New York City, to the steamer.

Later messages were exchanged between Paris and New York, between New York and Paris and between New York and the steamer Paris.

From the Reliance on October 3 there was radioed:

"Well, much courage. Happy you feel better."

The following day came one as follows:

"Well, much courage. Lonely. Glorious weather."

On October 9, Maxwell received the following message:

"No message Saturday—Are you ill? Beaucoup courage."

To which Maxwell replied the same day:

"Sent radio Saturday. Much better. Seems eternity. Heaps courage."

MESSAGE IN FRENCH.

A second message sent by Maxwell that day was written in French and read:

"Tes desires fortement exchanges. Courage eternal. Vos desires strangely reciprocated. Eternal courage."

A note of caution is woven into the message filed by Maxwell from New York on December 26. It read:

"Letters on Washington and Savoie received. Collect mail personally. Courage ever beyond words."

On December 29 there was wireless from Paris:

"May Angels be yours during coming year. Longing to see you. Heaps courage."

Mrs. Allan Ryan Has Nervous Collapse

South Casco, Me., July 31.—Mrs. Allan A. Ryan of New York, "poison pen" victim of George Maxwell, is dangerously ill here from nervous collapse because of her husband's charges of intimacy with Maxwell.

Mrs. Ryan collapsed in her cottage, the "New York," on the shore of Sebago Lake here, where she fled from New York after she had vigorously denied through her attorneys, her husband's allegations.

Mrs. Allan Ryan

She is under the care of a Portland physician, a New York specialist has been sent for. With her in the cottage, which is little more than a shack, are her children.

Mrs. Ryan reiterated her belief that Maxwell wrote the "poison pen" letter for which he was indicted. The indictment was dismissed for lack of conclusive evidence.

Barred From Medford House of Many Children

MRS. PETER S. DAWSON AND FAMILY

BROOKLINE RUM REVEALED BY TRAP DOOR

Harry McNeil, liquor officer of the Brookline police, seized liquor valued at $3,000 in the home of Lawrence Barron of No. 127 Hawes street, Brookline, after examining a floral scene on the wall paper and finding a secret trap door.

More than 125 bottles of Scotch whiskey, champagne, rye, Cognac and wine, were taken from the hole in the wall and removed to the station house.

Police allege Barron took liquors into the house on the adjoining lot, a search there revealing two ten gallon kegs of wine, eighty bottles of beer and seven cases of whiskey.

Complaints by neighbors of many automobiles stopping at the house prompted the police to watch the place for several days before the raid. The police assert that many persons went into the house and came out with packages and bundles of different descriptions.

According to the Brookline police, Barron has been arrested twice before. The first time he paid a fine. The second time, he appealed, and that case is pending in Dedham Superior Court.

Barron was summoned to appear in the Brookline court Friday, where he will be charged with unlawful possession and exposing liquor for sale.

R. I. FIRE ROUTS 5 FAMILIES

Woonsocket, R. I., July 31.—Five families were driven from their homes scantily clad early this morning when a $20,000 blaze swept through five structures on Parker street. The fire started in a small garage, and quickly spread to the store house and plant of the Diamond Match Company, and thence to two dwelling houses.

The families barely escaped serious injury. Both houses were partially destroyed. One was owned by Dolphis Lemire, No. 48 Parker street, who also owned the garage.

Family With Four Little Ones Appeal to Medford Commissioner From the Landlord's Ruling

Peter S. Dawson of No. 657 Boston avenue, Medford, a painter, with four children, appeared before Police Lieutenant Connors, Medford's housing commissioner, and lodged a complaint that he is being discriminated against by the agent of a 20-family block at No. 74 Newbern avenue, Medford, on account of his children.

The agent is Ernest C. Carr, realtor, with offices in Union square and Ball square, who lives at No. 27 Albion street, Somerville.

Dawson claims that he rented an apartment in the Newbern avenue house and paid a week's rent in advance on June 30. When he went to get the key it was refused and a refund of his rent offered.

REFUND REFUSED.

He refused to accept the refund. When he asked Carr why he refused him the flat Carr told him, he says, that he was objectionable because of his four children.

When interviewed at his home by a Boston American reporter, Carr said: "Maybe it is true that I refused to let him have the apartment because of his children. There are more than fifty children in that block now and I don't think there should be any more.

"The Dawsons want five rooms in that block and they have a family of six," Carr stated. "In my opinion that is too many in such small quarters. I do not want that apartment torn to pieces by anybody."

ARREST THREATENED.

"Furthermore," Carr continued, "Dawson said that he would move into that apartment if he had to force his way in and I warned him that if he did I would have him arrested for trespass."

Mrs. Dawson said that she paid the rent for the first week, got a key and was to have moved in July 16.

"On July 15, Carr," she said, "sent a girl to her house and asked for the key, saying that the telephone had to be removed. When we went to get the key the following day he refused to give it to us and told us we could not have the place, that he had changed his mind, because of our four children."

Carr said that he intended to let the apartment to some other tenant.

FUGITIVE MAY FIGHT RETURN

District Attorney's Office Prepares to Block Any Move Against Extradition

Assistant District Attorney Henry P. Fielding of Suffolk County left for New York today, prepared to oppose any fight which William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex County, may start against extradition proceedings.

While the last word from the Tombs, in which Corcoran is confined for the Massachusetts authorities, was to the effect that he was anxious to return and face his accusers, District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien decided to take no chances.

Word was passed among Corcoran's friends here that he intended to fight extradition, and as a result Mr. Fielding was hurried to New York.

Governor Smith of New York, honored the request of Governor Cox for the return of Corcoran, and Assistant Attorney General Albert Hurwitz and Inspector John J. Mitchell will bring the fugitive to this city.

Corcoran stoutly maintains that he is innocent of the blackmail charges against him, and that he will clear himself.

DE VALERA RUNS FOR ELECTION TO DAIL

Dublin, July 31.—Eamon De Valera, Valera's hopes to win at the polls the victory for Irish republicanism which he failed to gain by rifle and fire are causing speculation here as the election period approaches. Several exchiefs of De Valera's party have also intimated they will stand for election to the Dail.

MAN SHOT IN ROW IN S. LOON MAY DIE

Providence, R. I., July 31.—Pasquale Scabone, of No. 111 Gesler street, proprietor of a near-beer saloon at No. 501 Eddy street, who is alleged to have shot and probably fatally injured Robert Y. Burns, fifty-two, of Scituate, during a battle in the saloon was held in $4,000 bonds for trial August 10.

Scabone was also held for trial on a charge of assaulting Harry P. McCarthy of No. 112 Lockwood street, who received a gash in the head that required five stitches to close, from a bottle alleged to have been thrown by the defendant. He was unable to furnish bail.

3 PRIESTS WILL SING REQUIEM FOR MOTHER

The funeral of Mrs. Michael H. Connor of No. 5 Weyanoke street, Ashmont, will be held Thursday from St. Gregory's Church at Milton.

Three priests were at the bedside of Mrs. Connor when she died at her home yesterday afternoon after a short illness. Each was a son of the woman who not only gave three of her children to the church, but was survived in all by eight children and fourteen grandchildren. The immediate members of the family were all present at the bedside, including Michael P. Connor, the husband, when the end came.

For some time Mrs. Connor had been in poor health, and when a turn came for the worse her three sons in the priesthood were summoned. They are the Rev. Henry J. Connor of the Order of Lazarus, superior of St. Vincent's Seminary, Philadelphia; the Rev. George A. Connor, S. J. of Holy Cross College, and the Rev. Francis X. Connor of St. John's College, Brooklyn.

They are to chant solemn high mass of requiem at St. Gregory's on Thursday.

Other surviving children are Joseph M. Connor of Dorchester; Mrs. Thomas F. Vezzy; Mrs. Sarah Wheeler of Newburyport and the Misses Alice and Gertrude Connor, who make their home with their father.

Mrs. Connor was born in Chelsea, but spent the early part of her life in the West End. Later she removed to South Boston, and then to Ashmont, where she and Mr. Connor celebrated their golden wedding anniversary a year ago.

Interment is to be at Calvary.

HIKER LOSES WIFE 3 DAYS IN BOSTON

After being lost in Boston for three days, Mrs. Alma Wilson of Montreal was found by her husband, James Wilson. Publicity and the efforts of the Beck Ray police brought the two together. The Wilsons had hiked from Lockport, N. Y., to Boston. They became separated when the husband went into a house to seek information concerning an acquaintance in this city. The two are planning to stay here about two weeks and then go back to Montreal by way of Saratoga.

'UNKNOWN' SLASHES LYNN MAN'S FINGERS

Wresting a huge meat knife from an unknown assailant Joseph Boyer of No. 231 Summer street, Lynn, a leather worker, nearly lost two fingers on his left hand in the scuffle. His little finger and middle finger were badly gashed, five stitches being taken in a cut in the former and three in the latter. Boyer's assailant escaped and a search in the vicinity of Summer street, where the two men battled, failed to reveal his whereabouts.

MONKEY TURNS ON GAS; CLOSE CALL

New York, July 31.—Evelyn Sutton, chambermaid in a Riverside drive rooming house, often boasted about how quickly her pet monkey learned tricks, but the simian's aptitude nearly caused the girl's death when he turned on the gas as she slept. The monkey had seen Evelyn operate a gas stove. He opened every jet in the range and crawled under the bed, waiting to see what would happen. Evelyn was saved by first-aid methods, then her rescuers revived the monkey.

MRS. BARNES REBUKES HER DAUGHTER

LOVE FOR HOBBS IS UNDYING

Urges "New England's Dreyfus" to Hope for Happy Climax

By BERT FORD

Haverhill, July 31.—A veiled rebuke to her daughter was given to Mrs. Ethel C. Barnes in the following letter to Henry Hilliard Hobbs, principal in New England's Dreyfus case who is serving a ten to fifteen year term in New Hampshire State prison on the unsupported word of a fourteen-year-old Marlboro school girl.

"I will do my best to see ——," wrote Mrs. Barnes, "and talk with her, but you know her disposition and other things. I know I have a hard problem ahead of me. You know she never liked me up here."

Mrs. Barnes, comely young divorcee and former trained nurse, who served as Hobbs' housekeeper on his farm in Atkinson, N. H., again averred him that the place was so barren without him that she could not possibly continue to live there.

GRAPHIC PASSAGES.

"I see you at every turn. Every inch of the dear place speaks of you," is one of the graphic passages in the letter which describes her emotions on her first return visit after Hobbs had been sentenced.

"At Home, May 11, 1920.

"My Dear, Dear Henry:—I shall not attempt to draw a mental picture of how the house looked. I couldn't describe it. Anything they wanted they took. Everything has been used, except the preserves. All the groceries, including flour and lard, etc., are cleaned up, apples and all. Mother said they didn't use the preserves because I worked so hard to put them up. Instead of taking the feather bed up stairs, as I told them, they took my good one, and everything else.

"Someone has been up and helped themselves to the hay and farming forks and part of the light harness and also to the asparagus plants. C. has your nice suit case in Spring field. I have been busy tidying things. I never saw such havoc in my life.

A MARKED MAN.

"Dearie as we love the spot, my dear, I could never stay up here again. We would never be happy here either. As long as you stay in New Hampshire you are a marked man. The thing for us to do is to get out of this region entirely and meet new friends and see new faces. Pinky (the cat) is here with me tonight. He has just jumped from my lap. He talks away to me as of old and was glad to see me.

"The plum tree in front of the house is commencing to blossom. All the trees are just loaded with buds.

"I didn't have troubles enough; do have to have one more. The folks petitioned the Probate Court in Massachusetts for guardianship of ——. Sleeper assured them they would have no difficulty in obtaining it, as the result of her testimony on the stand. I cannot understand their attitude. Of course I haven't signed yet and shall not be in a hurry about it.

"Let them take it to court. I'll face them.

CRITICISES DAUGHTER.

"Dear one, I can never stay here and be content. I see you at every turn and will never be able to stand it. Every inch of the dear place speaks of you and you never will know how you are missed. I will do me best to see—— (her daughter) and talk with her, but you know her disposition and other things I need not mention, concerning her. I know I have a hard problem ahead of me. You know she never liked up here.

"You must be patient and keep up your courage. The more patient you are and the harder you work, the more they will help you where you are. What money you earn, my dear, you just enjoy the benefit of. I have enough to keep me going for awhile and when I get things straightened and my health improves I will hustle like a trooper. My nerves are bad, now, but with quiet and plenty of fresh air and sunlight I will be soon my old self again.

VISITS LUNCH CART.

"I got $5.67 rebate on my insurance policy. I went up to the dear lunch cart. It doesn't look as nice as when we had it. They are doing a good dinner trade, but nothing like ours. Some of the old customers wanted to be remembered to you. Fred Hyde has been very honest in his dealings with me.

"I went out and dug up some parsley for my supper tonight, also a few dandelions. They tasted good, but—

"Now, papa, dear, I am going to work for you every minute and do everything I possibly can to get you out, but you must be patient and not worry. The place has got to be sold to satisfy the court. If some one bids more than what is due, the surplus will be yours and mine. I couldn't stay here without you, dear. One room would be heaven with you. Your mother and father send their love.

EVER IN THOUGHTS.

"Remember my thoughts are with you day and night and my heart forever on the alert for something new to help. Be patient, is all I can say. I will work just as fast as I can for you, but it will take time.

"It is 10:30 standard time and my fire is most out. So I will say good-night, dear, and God bless my boy. Shall impatiently await your next with all my love and hope for good news soon.

"Ever yours,
"ETHEL."

WAR-BORN ROMANCE LEADS TO ALTAR

MISS JEANETTE FOLKS

Miles are but inches when Love sounds the call to Arms. And therefore engaging young hostess at one of Uncle Sam's Southern camps thinks nothing of journeying 2000 miles to Cambridge, where, on August 18, she will become the bride of the man she met when both were steadfast in the service of their country during the dark days of the World War.

GIRL JOURNEYS 2000 MILES TO WED HERE

Announcements of a forthcoming wedding revealed that a romance, which began at the Summer colony in Provincetown, thirteen years ago and grew while both girl and man were in the service, thousands of miles apart, will have a happy culmination August 18 in St. James Church, Cambridge.

On that day Miss Jeanette Folks, after a 2,000-mile journey from Fort Clark, Texas, where she has been army hostess, will become the bride of Edwin Phillips of Boston and Florida.

Miss Folks is a Boston girl, a graduate of Northfield Seminary and Sargent School, class of '15. Phillips is a University of Florida man.

During the war Miss Folks was a social worker in Southern army camps, somewhat to her disappointment, as she wanted to go overseas. Phillips served as a radio instructor and also taught languages in the naval school at Harvard.

The bridal pair will spend their honeymoon at Pilgrim Heights, Provincetown. In the Fall the groom will resume teaching in a New England school. The bride will continue her social work.

ROXBURY BOY HURT IN RUNAWAY CRASH

Samuel Stone, 9 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Stone of No. 16 Thorndike street, Roxbury, was badly injured when he was thrown from a runaway team that collided with a street car at Thorndike and Washington streets.

Samuel Stone was frightened.

The boy was standing alone at the rear end of the wagon when the horse became frightened. Several persons tried to stop the horse before the collision.

PREPARE ZEPPELIN FOR DELIVERY TO U. S.

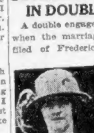
Washington, July 31.—Captain George W. Steele, Jr., who has just left for Friedrichshaven, Germany, to take charge of the airship ZR-1, the report immediately on progress being made on the giant dirigible, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt indicated. The ZR-1 is understood to be 90 per cent completed and is expected to attempt her trial flight in about two months, and shortly thereafter her voyage across the ocean with a German crew.

WORCESTER COUNTY HIRES RUM SPOTTERS

Fitchburg, July 31 — Worcester county is employing spotters to get evidence in liquor cases, according to disclosures in district court here when Joseph Brunelle of Lakeside avenue, Whalom Park, in Lunenburg, Mass., was up for selling alcohol to John Vaughn of Worcester on July 7 and 18. He was found guilty and assessed $50. Vaughn told Judge Gallagher he had been engaged by the county since October 2, 1923.

2 STEEPLEJACKS IN DOUBLE WEDDING

A double engagement was revealed when the marriage intentions were filed of Frederick Earle Webster with Miss Minnie Lambert, and Frank White with Miss Josephine Pender, all of No. 47 West Brookline street, South End.



It is a bending - house romance, Webster and White are steeplejacks, Miss Lambert and Miss Pender are chums and roommates. Both girls declare that they wanted to marry men with "high aspirations." There will be a double wedding sometime this week.

GIRL MISSING ON VISIT TO UNCLE

Springfield, July 31.—The police today were asked to search for fifteen-year-old Gladys V. Keaney of No. 80 Elbert street, Yonkers, N. Y., missing since Friday from the home of her uncle, William E. Clackett, No. 662 Carew street, this city.

The girl is said to have left her uncle's home through a bedroom window, after she had been reprimanded for staying out late nights and having too many callers.

She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 158 pounds, is of light complexion, has brown hair and blue eyes.

BRITISH RUHR PLAN REJECTED BY FRANCE

Aix-La-Chapelle, July 31 (AP)—The Belgian forces of occupation today expelled the burgomaster and five members of the municipal council. No reason for the expulsion was announced.

By JOHN T. BURKE
Universal Service Cable

London, July 31—Premier Poincare's reply to Lord Curzon, regarding the proposed British note to Germany, and the covering memoranda, was delivered to the British Foreign office.

The French Premier's reply firmly rejects all the British proposals. Some of the proposals are answered arbitrarily in the negative while others are rejected after long drawn out legal argument.

It is felt here that the sneering tone of the reply is likely to lead to a grave crisis.

The French answer demands that Britain make plain just how much she expects for reparations, asking bluntly if Britain will be satisfied with a sum from Germany which will enable her to liquidate her debt to America.

Misled by Paris newspaper predictions that Poincare's answer would be cordial, the reply had the effect of a bombshell here.

That the French Premier had probably overreached himself this time is indicated by an announcement that the discussion of the military occupation of the Ruhr and the settlement of the reparations problem will take place in the House of Commons Thursday on a motion for adjournment.

Germany Boosts Beer Tax and Others to Get Funds

Berlin, July 31. (AP).—The German Cabinet today adopted taxation measures to supply the country the considerable sum of money it needs owing to the depreciation of the mark.

The bills provide for a 100 per cent. increase in the income tax to meet the expenditure occasioned by the occupation of the Rhineland and the Ruhr. The trading companies must pay a heavily-increased corporation tax for the same reason. All these taxes will not be levied in the occupied territory.

The beer tax will be increased, but the tax on mineral waters is dropped.

The Reichsbank intends hereafter to regulate the purchase price of gold coin on the basis of the dollar quotation, says the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

Demand Reischsbank President Retire

Berlin, July 31. (AP).—The United Socialists are demanding the retirement of Rudolf Havenstein, president of the Reichsbank, and the managing directors of that institution on the ground that they failed to devise a program of financial reform which would have prevented the collapse of the mark.

The program also calls for conversion of the bank's loan policy to a gold basis. It asks for the triplication of taxes and forced delivery of grain by rural producers, who are not included in the industrial tax schedules.

ONLY A WEEK LEFT TO ENTER "CHARMING GIRLS" CONTEST

ENTER NOW! BECOMES SLOGAN

Married women are beginning

BEAUTIES SCRAMBLE TO ENTER CONTEST

THREE "CHARMING GIRLS"

to enter the Boston American's CHARMING GIRL tournament in an effort to win the free trip to Atlantic City with all expenses paid by this newspaper for one week during the Fall pageant.

The first married woman entered is Mrs. Lillian R. Smith of No. 200 West Seventh street, South Boston. She was nominated by her friend, Mrs. Rose Fernandez of Dorchester, who regards her as an unusually fascinating young woman. Many other friends agree with her. Mrs. Smith is twenty-five years of age.

Single women haven't a monopoly on charm.

Scores of girls are entering the tournament, but there is still room for more. It was a last minute entry that won last year. While we do not advise waiting until the eleventh hour, last year's result proves that everybody who enters gets an equal chance.

The tournament will close some time next week, so girls who intend to send their photographs should do so at once as the time for receiving them will not be extended beyond the announced closing date. We give fair warning to all. If your photograph arrives five minutes after the closing hour it will not be considered. So get busy. The contest is hackneyed, but DO IT NOW.

Among the recent entries is that of Miss Lillian MacKinnon of No. 2 Kenilworth street, Roxbury, a 24-year-old young woman who was nominated for the trip to Atlantic City by her sister Madeline. Miss Mildred Donahue of No. 182 Beach street, Wollaston, is another charmer whom friends believe she has a good chance of winning.

Others among the recent entrants include Miss Edna Antle, No. 13 Farrar street, Lynn; Miss Helen Cammill, No. 154 Woodside avenue, Winthrop; Miss Sally M. Forte, No. 7 Ford street, East Boston; Miss Helene Nelson, No. 58 Buckingham road, Wollaston; Miss Emma Hersey, No. 31 Clavering street, Wollaston; Miss Ethel Goodsell, No. 215 Central avenue, Wollaston.

"BABY BICYCLE BANDITS" SPEED AWAY WITH PURSE

The police of Lynn today are on the lookout for a couple of "baby bicycle bandits." The latest victim of the young holdup men is 8-year-old Alden Robbins, who was sent to the store by his mother with $5.

Near his home at No. 13 Averill street, two young boys on bicycles came along, demanded to examine the purse, took the money out and pedaled away.

DRIVES CAR IN BUILDING; ARRESTED FOR DRINKING

Charles Curran, twenty-five, of No. 456 Parker street, Roxbury, drove his automobile across the sidewalk into a building at McGee's Corners, Winthrop, which is how he came to be arrested on charges of intoxication and operating a car while under the influence of liquor.

He pleaded not guilty today in East Boston court and was held in $500 for a hearing Friday.

DRY LAWS HELP WORKMEN, GARY OPPOSES LIGHT WINE

New York, July 31—Prohibition has been of great benefit to American workmen, particularly those in the steel industry, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the steel corporation, said in a statement to the New York Times today.

Despite violations in large cities, the good effects of prohibition, he said, included decreases in crime and poverty, and increases in health and savings of worker. Mr. Gary opposed proposals to permit the sale of light wines and beer.

27 KILLED IN WRECK, 25 INJURED IN GERMANY

Berlin, July 31 (AP)—Twenty-seven persons are reported killed and twenty-five injured in a collision today between the Hamburg-Munich Express and a stationary train at Kreimsen station, near Cassel.

1500 CHEERING CHILDREN OFF FOR DAY AT NANTASKET

BOAT LOAD OF KIDDIES ON OUTING

Mid cries of "Good-bye," "Hot-dog," "Whee!" and cheers for the Boston American, fifteen hundred kiddies of Greater Boston pushed off from Rowe's Wharf on the Rose Chilton for a superb day's outing at Nantasket.

They were the guests of the Boston American, and their exclusive floating palace for the day was the Rose Chilton, the pick of the fleet of floating excursion palaces chartered by the American for the outings of the children of Greater Boston.

All morning a light mist was softly sifting down, but it was announced the boats would sail rain or shine. As the picturesque Rose Chilton backed from its wharf and turned her nose into the harbor a rift appeared in the angry clouds and a pearly silver sky opened up and spread across the morning. Even the weather softened for the kiddie, for it started to clear up into an old-fashioned Summer's plenty and outing day as soon as the trip was started.

The Rose Chilton was one of the four boats dripping with kiddies, chockful of joy and squiggling animal spirits, that left for Nantasket, where a happy program of recreation was provided.

No millionaire's kiddies could have received more attention. A special traffic force patrolled the streets leading to the wharf. Nearly 500 uniformed officers of the Nantasket Steamboat Company were on duty on the long board wharf, directing the children, while scores of other steamship attendants and representatives of the Boston American were on hand to see that every child was as safely stowed on board as if he were the President.

Hot dog—it was as good as a Fourth of July.

Rome, July 31.—H. Jordansky, successor of the late Vaslav Vorovsky, as head of the Russian commercial delegation here, arrived in Rome today. He asserted he had full powers to sign the Straits convention concluded at Lausanne.

Paris.—Raita Fujiyama, president of the National Federation of the Chambers of Commerce of Japan, was received by President Millerand at Rambouillet this afternoon.

Geneva, July 31 (6).—Latvia has notified the League of Nations that she has ratified the protocol establishing the permanent Court of International Justice. This makes the thirty-seventh State adhering to the court by act of its Parliament.

GIRL FROM WEST THROWN OUT OF OFFICE

An automobile parked at Summer and Devonshire streets early today.

As it came to a stop, an attractive girl approached the car and spoke to the driver.

"Pardon my seeming boldness," she said. "Do you mind if I step into your car a moment?"

"What's wrong? Anybody following you?"

She had opened the door by this time and eased her way in.

"I represent a chain of the largest magazines in America," she said. "I'd like to interest you in a subscription to any of them."

For the next five minutes the young woman brooked no interruptions. She rattled along so fluently that the driver of the car affixed his signature for a subscription to a magazine in which he had no possible interest.

Then he began to ask questions. For instance, the wedding ring.

"Doesn't mean a thing," said Miss Jean Sothern of Oakland, Cal., who is working her way across the country selling subscriptions. "It took me two bucks out in Chi and it gets me by better than brass knuckles.

"But here in Boston—I've been around here a month—I have found that the men on the whole, are pretty decent.

"Can you picture this? I went into one office. The owner must have been one of those Mayflower folks for he barked at me right fiercely, said, "Why, I don't even know you." I told him I didn't mind a bit, that all I wanted to do was to sell him a magazine.

"He put me out, almost threw me out. Just think, I had to come to cultured Boston to get tossed out of an office for the first time."

Rome—Two thousand pilgrims left today for the famous grotto in Lourdes, France. Pope Pius received the delegation, but insisted the 500 patients it included should not be taken to the Vatican, lest they be further fatigued. He sent them the apostolic benediction and good wishes for recovery.

First Ocean Saloon Planned to Supply Liners to U. S.

London, July 31 (I. N. S.)—The first "marine saloon" on record is being planned for mid-Atlantic trade by Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Broderick Hartwell, formerly of the British army, says the Evening News.

It is designed to sell supplies to passenger liners forbidden by the American prohibition laws to carry liquor into American ports.

A prospectus offering 20 per cent profits monthly to investors was printed by the Manchester Guardian. Arrangements are under way to ship 10,000 cases of liquors as the first consignment.

FIREMEN SAVE MAN IN PERIL FROM SMOKE

Joseph Heller, forty-eight years old, of 147 West Seventh street, South Boston, narrowly escaped death. Smoke from a fire that started in the second floor of the wooden dwelling made him unconscious, but after the door leading to his kitchen was broken down with an axe, the firemen rescued him. He was taken, in a serious condition, to the City Hospital.

Mr. Heller, who apparently had been asleep on a couch, awoke the sobber family on the third floor by his screams, giving them opportunity to escape through the smoke-filled hallways.

Laddermen Charles Hudson and Jack Moore of Ladder 5 and hoseman Richard Roycroft of Engine 1 found their way to the second floor and dropped down the kitchen door. Just inside, unconscious on the floor, they found Heller and carried him, with difficulty, through the suffocating and blinding stairways.

FLOOD DRIVES HUNDREDS OUT OF HOMES

Baltimore, July 31.—After causing millions of dollars damage to property, the flood in counties west and northwest of Baltimore reached its crest today and began to recede.

Cloudbursts and thunder storms caused the Patapsco River to overflow its banks carrying bridges and buildings before it, and driving hundreds of families from their homes.

Rescue parties fought through the darkness and rising waters to save families whose homes were marooned. Town after town was thrown into darkness.

Barns and livestock were swept away. Mills and power plants were flooded and their machinery wrecked. Whole sections of railroad tracks were torn up and whirled away.

The greatest damage was at Sykesville, Westminster, Woodstock and Ellicott City. The flood crept toward the highest span of the new bridge on the Baltimore and Frederick pike and inundated the plant under the hills at Ilchester, which furnishes light and power for the adjacent territory.

4 MEN AND WOMAN BEAT AND ROB AUTOIST OF $200

Worcester, July 31—Beaten into unconsciousness by two assailants after a man had jumped on to the running board of his automobile, and grabbing the wheel, turned it so sharply that the car overturned, Mikodom Rolfe of No. 10 Westdale street, was robbed of $210 and severely beaten by two men members of an automobile party of four men and a woman on Lake avenue.

With him at the time of the assault was Agnes Povaitis, his sister-in-law, who lives at the same residence.

"We can get out early this evening, Mother, for a longer spin. A supper like this saves you work. And the beauty of it is, bread and milk is so good for us all—we will all sleep better."

"That's Why I Am Careful About My Hands While Cooking"

Scene: A fresh, bright, modern kitchen Place: Perhaps in your neighborhood

Time: This afternoon—just before dinner

Mrs. Youngwife is thinking aloud:

"When mother taught me her kitchen secrets she missed only one point.

"Burnished pans, a fresh-scrubbed ice-box, spotless sink and stove are awfully important. So are the cheerful white walls and clean windows. They help make cooking a pleasure.

"But I honestly believe that lecturer at the club told us the most important thing of all.

"My goodness! Millions of germs can collect on the tip of one fingernail. They are brought into my kitchen on vegetables, much handled fruit, packages from the stores, on greasy milk bottles—in fact on anything that many hands have touched. Flies, too, are a danger. And those germs will get into the food unless I rid my hands of them. I can't be too careful of my hands during cooking hours if I am to protect the health of Daddy and the youngsters.

"Clean hands! I now use Lifebuoy Health Soap constantly while cooking.

"It seems that in Mother's day clean hands were hands which were not dirty.

"Clean hands today are hands which have been purified.

"And Lifebuoy certainly does keep the skin in wonderful condition—soft, smooth and white."

What is Lifebuoy Health Soap?

A germicidal action without irritation! A soap that creates beautiful skin by the simple perfection of its deep, healing, cleansing action! A deodorant which removes the cause of skin odors—overcomes them at their source!

If you are a normal woman, busy in a hundred places each day, shaking hands, telephoning, brushing against people, resting your hands upon the dirty surfaces of any number of objects—you are germ-contaminated. That is, until the deadly microbes have been removed.

You, too, should see that Health Soap is used frequently during cooking hours. The best thing about Lifebuoy is that it can be used constantly without damaging the fine-textured skin. The famous Lifebuoy health substance soothes as it purifies.

You will love the wholesome Lifebuoy health odor. Place a cake every place where there is running water. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

TROUBLE SCENTED ABROAD

Wealthy Englishmen Seeking Haven From Impending Labor Storm

By GRACE DESCHAMPS
(Copyright, 1923, by the Boston American)

More than one titled Englishman will make New England his foster-home.

With English politics at least aesthetically distasteful to the upper class gentry, a congenial recreative abode is in the minds of numerous scions of England's nobility.

Geraldine Farrar, the titled foregoers.

Geraldine Farrar's five-million-dollar resort in Lyndonville, Vt., will not house only the titled foregoers.

Major De Trafford Craven, president of "Manor Vail, Incorporated," the firm name of the organization financing the great singer's famous country club and health resort, a British war hero and himself a member of a titled family, makes that prediction.

OVERSEAS TIES

"It's bound to come," Major Craven prophesied. "America is the blood relation of England and many an Englishman is turning his thoughts here. What would be more natural than that an Englishman should wish a second home here in a country so closely akin to his own?

"I don't mean, of course, that Englishmen would lose their identity as Englishmen, but it would be a happy place to turn to when the atmosphere across the sea became distasteful."

The movement of England's titled class to the Farrar resort will mark only the beginning of the discovery of America by upper class Englishmen, Major Craven declared.

"This sort of thing," he added, "is a mighty healthy way to bring the peoples of the world together. When they can come upon common ground and play together, live and understanding among the ruling powers is bound to be the result.

SEEK HAVEN HERE

"The upper classes in England today are willing to let labor take a winning part in the game. They seem to be in a state of expectancy, and the newer course offers, at least, something different. The traditions are still dear to them, however, and a place of rest here in America, away from what is taking place at home, is becoming a popular idea."

Major Craven still maintains a country estate in Sussex, England, although he asserted that the Farrar estate would, in all probability, become a permanent home.

The blue-blooded guests of Geraldine Farrar will have the finest maple sugar grown, as New England's sweetest offering.

"We have here the finest sugar orchard in the world," asserts Miss Farrar, more than 150 trees planted and cared for by Mr. Vail. The yield is enormous and the sugar produced is the finest known.

SELF SUPPORTING

"The estate will be entirely self-supporting. Even the therapeutic waters of Manor Vail Springs, brought from the mountains miles away are located on the outer edges of the estate. The waters have been analyzed and are found to contain ingredients considered of high curative value, besides being believed highly beneficial for the skin.

"So you see," the great singer smiled, "we shall have everything in the way of beauty here."

WIFE SUES RICH HUB BROKER

Gay Parties With "Manicurist in Black" Charged in Divorce Action

Henry E. Roberts, wealthy Boston oil broker, staged gay week-end parties in Boston hotels and in auto inns in the Berkshire Hills with a mysterious "manicurist in black," according to charges made by his wife in a divorce action filed in the East Cambridge courts.

Roberts, while not denying the charges, says he is going to fight the divorce suit, being moved to do so by memories of his wife kneeling in prayer for his "deliverance from other women" at their home in the exclusive Wedgemere section of Winchester.

NEVER KNEW LOVE.

"I never knew how much I loved her or realized how much she loved me until she was gone," declared Roberts.

Mrs. Roberts left her home two weeks ago. She cannot be found. The oil broker said he had engaged detectives to find her and had prepared to offer a reward for information that would lead to her whereabouts.

The wife, Mrs. Angelena D. Roberts, is fifty-six years old. Her husband is the same age. Their home is at No. 37 Wildwood street, Winchester. They have two daughters, Miss Ruth Roberts, twenty-four years old, who has disappeared with her mother, and Mrs. Henry Horn of No. 229 Broadway, Arlington.

GETS $300 MONTH.

The Middlesex County Probate Court granted Mrs. Roberts separate maintenance of $300 a month pending the trial of the divorce suit in September.

Mrs. Roberts was also granted an injunction restraining her husband from interfering with her personal liberty.

BOSTON MOTHER OF THREE PRIESTS DIES

Mrs. Michael P. Connor, wife of Michael P. Connor of No. 5 Weymouth street, Ashmont, and the mother of three priests, died at her home after a short illness. The surviving children are the Rev. Henry J. Connor of the Order of Lazarus, superior of St. Vincent's Seminary, Philadelphia; the Rev. George A. Connor, S. J., of Holy Cross College; the Rev. Francis X. Connor of St. John's College, Brooklyn; Joseph M. Connor of Dorchester; Mrs. Thomas F. Veary; Mrs. Sarah Wheeler of Newburyport and the Misses Gertrude and Alice Connor, who make their home with their father.

14,000 IMMIGRANTS AWAIT AUGUST QUOTA

New York, July 31.—Thousands of aliens from a score of European and Asiatic countries hung over the rails of steamship liners in Gravesend Bay today whiling away the weary hours before midnight when the immigration quota for August opens. Thousands more were on speeding steamers from Mediterranean ports, France, England, Germany and the Scandinavian countries. In all, fourteen vessels, carrying 14,000 aliens, will be ready to race for quarantine when the quota opens.

QUITS RICH HUSBAND AFTER 7 MONTHS

MRS. JAMES McVICKAS

Widow of Millionaire. Philadelphia saw manufacturer who has separated from her husband, a New York clubman. She is mum about divorce plans.

MRS. M'VICKAR'S ROMANCE IS SHATTERED

New York, July 31 (U. S.).—After a marriage of only seven months, Mrs. James McVickar, who was the widow of William Disston, Philadelphia saw millionaire, said today she had separated from her husband, wealthy New York clubman.

Mrs. McVickar said she did not know whether a divorce would follow. She said her physician and her lawyer had advised her not to discuss the breakup of her romance.

McVickar denied the separation. "It is ridiculous," he said.

Mrs. McVickar is as well known in London and Paris society as in New York and Newport. Her daughter married John Wanamaker.

McVickar's first wife, who obtained a divorce four years ago, was Miss Daisy Emerson, daughter of Isaac Emerson, the bromo-seltzer millionaire of Baltimore.

OPPOSE BUS LINES FOR EAST BOSTON

Ex-Representative Thomas A. Niland at the mass meeting in East Boston High School in protest against the announced intention of the Boston Elevated to remove the tracks and cars on Lexington street, East Boston, denounced the members of the Board of Trustees as browbeaters of the people.

MAYOR ORDERS RUM CLEAN-UP IN SOMERVILLE

Drunkenness is on the increase in Somerville, once the banner no license city of the Commonwealth, according to records compiled by Clerk of the Somerville District Court, Daniel H. Bradley.

Daniel H. Bradley

Mayor John M. Webster, dissatisfied with the conditions, has ordered the Liquor Squad, of which Sergeant James M. Lynch is the head, to "clean up" the city or there will be "something doing" in the police department.

Mayor Webster has personally watched places complained of and has kept tabs on the number of men going in and coming out and their conditions.

John M. Webster

He found several places "wide open" and minced no words in informing the police.

One man arrested for drunkenness died within a few hours after his arrest. Thirty-three were arrested in one day.

The Churchmen's Union has appointed a vigilance committee of a hundred men and women to help in the clean up.

Between January 1 and July 1, 1923, there were 690 arrests for drunkenness. The record for a single day was broken on Saturday, with thirty-three men arrested. Three years ago in 1920, there was only 240 arrests for drunkenness in the whole year. The arrests in 1916 numbered 650; in 1917, 400; in 1918, 387; in 1919, 583, and in 1921, they numbered 535.

MAN DEAD; SLAIN, WIFE CHARGES

Body of Paul Klemka Found in South Boston Hallway

Paul Klemka, forty-eight years old, No. 8 City Point court, South Boston, was found dead in a rear hallway at No. 10 City Point court Elizabeth Klemka, his wife, declares her husband was murdered by a life-long enemy.

Peter Pilipas, forty-seven years old, No. 10 City Point court, was arrested and charged with the crime. He was later released. Until a late hour no other arrests had been made.

Klemka's body was found by his wife more than ten hours after Klemka was seen by a neighbor to enter the City Point court hallway.

ENTERED PILIPAS' HOUSE.

Mrs. Margaret Haywood, No. 16 City Point court, told the police she chanced to be looking from her rear window when she saw Klemka try his own door, then enter Pilipas' house next door.

A few minutes later, she said, she heard a man shout for help. She then heard a noise that sounded as though a man had fallen or been thrown down the stairs.

Medical examination showed Klemka died from a broken neck. There were numerous other injuries, such as might have been suffered in falling or being pushed down a long flight of stairs.

HUNTS FOR CHILDREN.

According to Mrs. Klemka, she was not home when her husband returned about 10 p. m. She had gone to hunt for her children, Charles, fourteen years old, Beatrice, twelve years old, and Stella, eight years old, whom she found playing in the street.

"I think he came home and found the doors locked," she said, "and he must have thought I was at Pilipas' home, for Mrs. Haywood said she saw him try our door and then go to Pilipas' place.

Pilipas, after being released by the police, returned to his home and watched from an upstairs window the proceedings at the dead man's home. He refused to be interviewed or to talk to anyone.

BACK BAY MANHOLE COVERS BLOW OFF

Residents near the intersection of Beacon and Berkeley streets, Back Bay, were aroused from their sleep when four manhole covers were blown off by the pressure of gas which had accumulated underneath them. No one was hurt. Police headquarters were deluged with telephone calls inquiring as to the nature of the so-called explosion for some time after the incident.

HARD COAL AT $16 TO BE PEAK

Dealer Blames Treadway's Pessimism for Present Panicky Feeling

The price of anthracite coal for domestic consumption may reach $16 in Boston before the winter is over, but that will be the highest point.

That is the opinion of Lynn M. Ranger of 141 Milk street, dealer in anthracite and bituminous coal, who likewise figures that the recent advance from $15 to $15.50 a ton, was accelerated by Congressman Treadway's forecast that householders faced a burden of $25 a ton, with the consequent rush for coal, which developed that a shortage existed.

WILL NOT TAKE SOFT COAL.

Together with other Boston dealers, Mr. Ranger declares there is no chance of forcing New England householders to use bituminous coal, and he furthermore asserts that the present large supply of soft coal in Boston and vicinity is due to the fact that there is no market for it.

W. A. Clark, secretary for the Retail Coal Dealers' Association brands as absurd any statement that there is a conspiracy to force bituminous coal on New England for domestic purposes.

"An agent for the bituminous interests was in Boston some time ago to develop the New England field", said Mr. Clark, "but he learned that hard coal is what the householders want in New England and that they won't use anything else."

OPPOSE HIGH PRICE.

Inquiries among various dealers leads to the conclusion that there would be no shortage for immediate hard coal deliveries in Greater Boston, if the big dealers were willing to purchase high-priced or independent coal.

In other words those big dealers figure that $15.50 and possibly $16 is the limit of what the Greater Boston consumers will stand as to prices.

Independent company coal may be obtained, but at such a cost at the mines that it would be necessary to charge from $17 to $19 and possibly $20 a ton to the consumer.

KILLED BRIDE FOR SLEEPING TOO LONG

Pittsburgh, July 31.—Patrick Coyne, whose bride of a few weeks was found in their home at Port Perry July 17, confessed in a hospital to Chief of Detectives Braun that he killed her.

Coyne, according to the chief, said he was angry because his wife stayed in bed too long, and they quarreled.

Coyne went to work, the chief reports him saying, but was so worried his mind was not on his work, and, missing his footing on top of the train, he fell between the cars and lost both legs.

5 MILLION SPENT BY DODGE BROTHERS

Detroit, July 31.—Dodge Brothers have virtually completed their $5,000,000 building program. The plan included a building for the manufacture of closed cars, a new tire side building, a $1,000,000 addition to the power plant, and a duplication of the assembly plant giving the company a capacity of about 1,000 cars a day.

Girl Burned at Play

Dover, N. H., July 31.—Irene Moore, ten, daughter of James Moore of Payne street, was severely burned on the right leg while playing around the city incinerator.

A young and beautiful woman creates a sensation at a first night in New York by rising in her seat at the theatre and coolly surveying the audience through her glasses, after the European fashion. Clavering and his friend, Dinwiddie, are immediately interested, and the latter receives a shock, declaring that she is the image of a former society belle, Mary Ogden, though much younger than she should be at that time. He thinks she may be a daughter. Clavering suggests that a society leader, Mrs. Oglethorpe, be asked to solve the mystery. She consents and calls on the fair unknown, but learns nothing. Clavering follows Mary home from the theatre and aids her to get into the house as she has lost her key. She invites him in and tells him she is Countess Josef Zattiany. He nearly guesses her secret.

READ ON. THE THRILLS COME FAST

THE last time Clavering had sat opposite a woman by a log fire both had enjoyed the deep luxury of easy chairs and his hostess had seemed to melt into the depths until they enfolded her. But Miss Dwight never lounged. Her backbone appeared to be made of castiron. She sat erect today on a hassock while he reclined in a chair that exactly fitted his spine and enjoyed contrasting her with the other woman. Gora Dwight had no beauty, but she never passed unnoticed in a crowd, even if unrecognized.

Her oval eyes were a pale clear gray, cold, almost sinister, and she wore her mass of rich brown hair on top of her head and down to her heavy eyebrows. Her mouth was straight and sharply cut, but mobile and capable of relaxing into a charming smile, and she had beautiful teeth. The nose was short and emphatic, the jawbone salient. It was, altogether, a disharmonic type, for the head was long and the face short, broad across the high cheekbones; and her large light eyes set in her small dark face produced a disconcerting effect on sensitive people, but more often fascinated them.

Clavering had been told that in her California days she had possessed a superb bust, but long years of unremitting work in France and England had taken toll of her flesh and it had never returned; she was very thin and the squareness of her frame was emphasized by the strong uncompromising bones. But her feet and her brown hands were long and narrow, and the straight lines of the present fashion were very becoming to her.

She wore today a gown of dark red velvet trimmed with brown fur and a touch of gold in the region of the waist. It was known that she got her clothes at the "best houses."

She was a curious mixture, Clavering reflected, and not the least contradictory thing about her was the way in which her rather sullen face could light up; exactly as if some inner flame leapt suddenly behind those uncanny eyes and shed its light over the very muscles of her cheeks and under her skin. The oddest of her traits was her apparent pleasure in seeing a man comfortable while she looked like a ramrod herself; and she was the easiest of mortals to talk to when she was in the right mood.

She was morose at times, but her favorites were seldom inflicted with her moods, and of all her favorites Clavering reigned supreme. This he knew and took advantage of after the fashion of his sex. He told her all his troubles, his ambitions, which he believed to be futile—he had written plays which his own criticism had damned and no eye but his own and Gora Dwight's had ever seen—and she refreshed and stimulated his mind when his daily column must be written and his brain was stagnant. She also knew of his secret quest of the one woman and had been the repository of several fleeting hopes.

And never for a moment had she thought him saturnine and disillusioned. Not she! Gora Dwight had an extraordinary knowledge of men for a woman to whom men did not make love. But if she had neither beauty nor allure she had genius; and a father confessor hardly knows more about women than a nurse about men. Moreover, she had her arts, little as men suspected it.

Long ago she had read an appraisement of Madame Recamier by Saint-Beuve: "She listens avec seduction." Gora had no intention of practising seduction in any of its forms, but she listened and she never betrayed, and her reward was that men sound and whole, and full of man's inherent and technical peculiarities, had confided in her. Altogether she was well equipped for fiction.

She was listening now as Clavering told her of his ad-

FLAMING YOUTH By WARNER FABIAN

The Great Reform Novel of the Year, Baring Innermost Secrets of Luxury-Loving Class

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Mona Fentriss, young, beautiful and the wife of a consulting engineer, has been told by her physician, Bob Osterhout, who is in love with her, that she has only a short time to live. Mona gives a gay party, telling Pat to go to bed, but the latter borrows a sister's dress, steals downstairs and has "a taste of life." Mona dies and Constance receives a call from Cary Scott, her mother's first admirer. Scott is much taken with Pat. A party is planned for the Dungerfields to christen the new swimming pool. A thunder storm puts out the lights and the guests go into the water without clothes. Dee modestly hesitates on the balcony and then—the lights came on, revealing her in a blinding glare. Pat succumbs to Cary Scott. Dee's husband is badly hurt. She refuses to elope with Wollaston. Pat confesses to Dee her relations with Cary. She goes to New York to see Ralph Fentriss' "flossie" and is invited to Edna Carroll's parties. She meets Leo Slenak, and arranges to go to him in Boston but his appearance kills her love. She becomes engaged to Standish, and tells him she has had an affair with another man. He refuses to desert her, but she breaks the engagement when she hears Scott has a divorce.

NOW GO ON WITH THIS ENTHRALLING STORY.

"WELL, no; Cary isn't coming back. I just said that as an experiment. Though, of course, he might come if you wanted him. You do want him, don't you, Pat dear?"

"Sometimes. Other times I don't. How did you know?"

"When you've nothing to do but think," he explained, "you get tired of thinking about yourself by and by and begin to think about other people. I've been thinking a lot about you since we got to be pals."

"You're a dear, Jimmie-jams."

"I'm an old crab. But I'm fond of you. And Scott was good to me, too, when I was first laid up. When you think hard enough about people you're fond of you begin to see things about them, even things they may not see, themselves."

"Even things that maybe aren't there at all," she mocked.

"This is there," he answered. "There's no use your pretending. When we talk I'm always catching echoes of Scott's influence in what you say. You're a different Pat from what you were before you knew him. I don't think you get on so well with yourself."

"You are clever, Jimmie. I don't. And it makes me furious."

"At him?"

"Yes. I don't know. At myself, too."

"I had a letter from him last week. We've carried on a desultory correspondence since he left."

Pat's eyes kindled. "What does he say about me?"

"How do you know he says anything about you?"

"Don't tease. Tell Pattie."

"You ought to know Scott well enough to realize that he isn't the sort to display his feelings in a show window. But there are lines that one could read between. Have you written to him, Pat?"

"No."

"Aren't you going to send him?"

Her face darkened with troubled memories. "I couldn't. You don't understand. I couldn't Jimmie."

"I could write."

"You shan't. You mustn't; if you do I'll hate you. Promise."

"All right. I promise. But don't you really want to see him ever again?"

"Sometimes I think I'll die if I don't," she said simply. "Other times—I don't know."

"Why not find out? Won't you let me write?"

"No; no. You've promised."

"Very well. I'll keep to it. Take me inside, slave."

He did not write. He cabled. Faint spice of budding clematis was fragrant in the air at Holiday Knoll. On her way to the street Pat passed through the arbor with a little, warm shiver of recollection. How long ago that other October seemed, that night when, amidst the scents and seductions of the year's late warmth she had opened her arms and her lips to Cary Scott in that first, unforgettable red kiss of their passion; how far away; how deep buried under other, varied experiences! Would he ever come back? It was many weeks since James had talked of him, suggesting the possibility, and the subject that had not again been brought up. Would she really want him back if she could have him? And what would she do with him if he came? Or he with her? Or fate with them both? Pat had become a good deal of a fatalist. It was a convenient theory and dovetailed neatly with her religion, enabling her to compound with her conscience at the smallest expense of self-blame. Fate, she felt, had saved her from marrying Monty Standish, which was a large count to its credit.

Chiefly because of Monty she was going down to the village. For he was due back after a long absence for repairs to his damaged heart, and the local old cats had prophesied that Pat would leave town, for a time anyway, "if she possesses a grain of decent feelings." Pat purposed to do nothing of the sort. Neither Monty Standish nor any other living specimen of the man sex could run her off the public streets! For excuse she had some marketing to do, and she set forth with her most nonchalant air and independent shoulder swing. She'd show 'em whether she was ashamed or afraid to meet Monty! After parvading the town for a while she would run over for her daily chatter with Jimmie-jams. Jimmie was growing very frail and weary and had a look of eager, anxious expectancy, these days. Pat thought that she knew what he was waiting for. There would be a big void in her life when Jimmie got his release.

Emerging from the fruit shop where she hoped to find an avocado pear for him, she saw a man standing at the curb. His back was turned, but there was that in the set of his shoulders, the slender grace of the figure, the poise of his head which startled her heart to one great throb of excited delight. Here, indeed, was relief from dull days, food for that great of excitement, of "thrill," which life had not yet begun to sate for her.

"Mist-er Scott!"

He whirled about. His face lighted up. Taking the hand which she held out, he said, with the old, mocking half-lift of the brows:

"Still that, Pat?"

"What are you doing in Dorrisdale?"

"I've just been telephoning Miss Patricia Fentriss."

"She's out."

"So I was informed. I began to suspect it's true."

Both blushed. Pat, quite charmed with herself for the light and easy manner in which she was carrying off this potentially difficult situation, committed the error of looking up into his eyes. There she read a hunger and a want that made her avert her gaze. She sought hurriedly for something to say.

"I didn't even know that you were in this country."

"I wasn't until last night." He had fallen into step beside her.

"I was going to the Jamesons'," she remarked a little lamely. "I go there every morning."

Dan Makes Ready

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

Intimately Revealing the Life of a Modern and Precocious Society Flapper

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

By ANN LISLE.

I turned and flung myself into his arms. My gratitude and my relief knew no bounds. I'd been dreading Jim's attitude. From the moment when Virginia began accusing Neal of deliberately making off with the money I'd waited in heartsick terror for the Harrison tie to assert itself. I realized in the moment when he came to Neal's defence how I'd feared lest Jim take his cue from Virginia.

"A little visit to the country will be good for Carol," I managed to say.

"Phoebe's baby—little Phoebe—stays with me!"

There was a grim finality in Jennie's manner as she made this declaration. I loosed Jim's arm and looked up into his face with a quick—

"Jim, we've a claim to Carol. Make Virginia see—"

"Oh, we don't want a baby around," said Jim placatingly. "The child's well off at Dreamwold, for the present anyway. That's settled. Now let's get down to the problem that isn't so exactly settled. We have only tomorrow to raise sixty thousand dollars. And you say that your bank credit's stretched to the utmost, Pat?"

"To the limit," replied Pat tersely.

"Let's send the girls to bed and think this out," suggested Jim.

"I'm tired; I'm glad to get some sleep. I want to start out for Dreamwold and little Phoebe tomorrow," replied Virginia.

I dared not protest that Neal wanted the baby called "Carol." His wishes would have small weight with Virginia now. And there was indeed a more immediate problem to be met. So I took Virginia to her room and made sure that the fruit and flowers were there and the covers of the bed turned back. Then with the briefest of good-nights, I returned to the living room. I had no thought of eavesdropping, but I couldn't help overhearing Jim saying to Pat:

"This is a fine mess we've got you into. If Anne realized the seriousness of the situation, she'd sell out her business to pay you off."

"Be glad then she doesn't realize," said Pat.

Hard on his words, I walked in on the room. But in the interval I had known a moment of heroics in which I felt that I ought to offer to sell out if that would bring Pat the money he needed. Then I recognized that "A. L. Harrison, Advertising Consultant," could make far more money in business than she could get for the good will of her little firm. So I resolved to move slowly and to decide carefully before I did anything radical.

"I do realize how serious this situation is," I said quietly. "I came back to say that we might put the cash we need from Tom Mason and Mr. Haldane. I'm glad to go to either of them."

"Will you do that?" asked Pat eagerly. "If they won't accommodate us I can sell the old Paradise property. I paid seventy thousand for it and have been holding it waiting for the city to move back that way again. Sona says it ought to be worth a hundred thousand at a minimum. Today I'm afraid it isn't up to what I paid. Still I could get all we need—"

"Oh, don't!" I cried. "I'm sure Tom would let us have the sixty thousand on a part—and I know Mr. Haldane can be counted on."

IN ENGLISH EYES

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Nations drop to pieces like ropes of sand if there is no hearty patriotism in their people. Countries which let foreigners furnish their histories, educate their historians and insidiously edit their school histories are in peril of undermining their own foundations.

Do you believe that the American Revolution was the result of the ambition of George Washington and other patriots who stood by him in those times that tried men's souls—a wicked ambition to bring themselves forward and to gain money, influence and advantages for themselves at the cost of the blood of their fellow-countrymen?

Do you think that the Revolution which made us an independent self-governing nation was an accident or a mistake? Do you feel that it would have been better for us today if the colonies had not revolted but had remained dependent parts of Great Britain, an incurable monarchy, with all that such a condition implies of court ceremonies, royal and aristocratic privilege, social inferiority to hereditary kings and princes, incredible notions of caste and of devotion to a dynasty and its personal interests and glory? Would you be proud to be living under the reign of King George?

I hope not. But listen to what Lord Rosebery, a living English statesman, of notable tolerance of mind in many ways, has said right in our day. He is chasing that political ignis fatuus that has obsessed so many of his countrymen, and which, unfortunately, they have succeeded in setting aglow in the minds of some Americans who write "corrected history" (which means history remade to suit the plans of the writer.) Lord Roseberry exclaims:

"One cannot but pause for a moment to reflect that but for one small incident—the very ordinary circumstance of the inheritance of a peerage—this Empire might have been incalculably greater. Had the elder Pitt, when he became First Minister, not left the House of Commons, he would have retained his sanity and authority. He would have prevented, or suppressed, the reckless budget of Charles Townshend, have induced Charles III to listen to reason, have introduced representatives from America into the Imperial Parliament, and preserved the thirteen American colonies to the British Crown.

Preserved us to the British Crown! We cannot blame the Englishman, from his point of view, for lamenting because that to him the extremely desirable object was not attained, but would you have thought it possible that professed Americans, professing to tell the truth about American history, would try to plant the seeds of this English regret for the loss of an empire in the minds of American school children?

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair Use Delatone

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 3 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed. Mix fresh as wanted.

WHAT THE STARS SAY

LUCKY DAY TO INVEST.

TODAY'S astrological forecast is most favorable as it is based on the splendid position of Jupiter in trine aspect with Luna.

This the sages herald as being the forerunner of all manner of good fortune and fulfilled ambitions. It may be a time for pushing all interests toward the goal desired, especially to investment in sound stocks.

Wednesday will be lucky for love affairs. See horoscope tomorrow.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"A man of destiny."

This epithet was first applied to Napoleon I by Sir Walter Scott.

"Licked into shape."

A popular notion of distant days was that a bear cub was born shapeless and that the mother licked it into shape. Hence comes the expression quoted above.

"Like Angels' visits, few and far between."

The poet Campbell (1777-1844) coined this phrase to describe infrequent visits.

"To be at sixes and sevens."

The use of this phrase to express a disagreement has the sanction of Shakespeare who employs it in "Richard III."

"Murdering the King's English."

Shakespeare put it a little more mildly, using the word "abusing" instead of "murdering," in his play "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

"Silence gives consent."

Dirty marks on paint can be removed by rubbing first with a slice of lemon and then with whitening. Afterwards wash with soap and water.

Macrame work should never be washed, but cleaned with equal parts of dry oatmeal and very stale breadcrumbs; lay the work on a clean cloth, sprinkle freely with the mixture, scrub with a brush having fairly hard bristles, shake off the soiled oatmeal, and repeat the process until the lace is clean.

Stockings clocked or embroidered in contrasting colors should be dried with a cloth or tissue paper inside to absorb the moisture.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Now Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Washington, D.C.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which a physician said I would have to have for a very bad case of female trouble. My system was all run down; for two years after my little girl was born. Then I read of your wonderful medicine and decided to try it. I could hardly drag one foot after the other, and after taking six bottles of the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I now do all my housework, also washing and ironing, and do not know what real trouble is. My health is fine, and I weigh 140 pounds. When I started taking it I weighed 120 lbs. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any one who is suffering from the troubles I have run down. You may use this testimonial for I am only too glad to let suffering women know what the Vegetable Compound did for me."—Mrs. Ida Hewitt, 1629 Penna. Ave. S.E., Washington, D.C.

Such letters from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A recent canvass reports 98 out of every 100 women are benefited by

Year's Best Selling Novel Reveals Mysterious Return of Youth and Beauty to Old Woman

"Are you sure she is not playing a part deliberately?" she asked. "Having her little fun after those horrible years? She looks quite equal to it, and a personal drama would have its attractions after an experience during which a nurse felt about as personal as an amputated limb. And while one is still young and beautiful—what a lark!"

"No! I don't believe anything of the sort. I fancy that if she didn't happen to be so fond of the theatre she'd have come and gone and none of us been the wiser. Her secret is sui generis, whatever it is. I've racked my mind in vain. I don't believe she is the Countess Zattiany's daughter, nor a third cousin, nor the Countess Josef Zattiany. I've tried to recall every mystery story I ever read that would bear on the case, but I'm as much in the dark as ever."

Fallen Off

"And you've thought of nothing else. Your column has fallen off."

"Do you think that?" He sat up. "I've not been too satisfied myself."

"You've been filling up with letters from your correspondents after the fashion of more jaded columnists. Even your comments on them have been flat. And as for your description of that prize fight last night, it was about as thrilling as an account of a flower show."

He laughed and dropped back. "You are as refreshing as a cold shower, Cora. But, after all, even a poor columnist must be allowed to slump occasionally. However, I'll turn her off hereafter when I sit down to my typewriter. She knows a typewriter is no Wagnerian orchestra and should be warranted to banish sentiment. Sentiment is not the word, though. It is plain raging curiosity."

Never Misled

"Oh, no; it is not," said Miss Dwight coolly, lighting another cigarette, which she carefully fitted into a pair of small gold tongs; neither rich nor nicotine stained, seen on those long aristocratic fingers. "You are in love with her, you child."

"I am not!"

"Oh, yes, you are. I've never been misled for a moment by your other brief rapacities—the classic Anne—the demonian Marian—but you're landed high and dry this time. The mystery may have something to do with it, but the woman has far more. She is the most beautiful creature I ever beheld and she looks intelligent and keen in spite of that monumental repose. And what a great lady!" Cora sighed. How she since had longed to be a great lady! She no longer cared a fig about it, and would not have charged her present state for that of a princess in a stable world. But old dreams die hard. There was no one of Madame Zattiany's abundant manifestations of high fortune that she admired more. "Go in and win, Clavey—and without too much loss of time. She'll be drawn into her own world here sooner or later. She confesses to being a widow, so you needn't get tangled up in an intrigue."

"You forget she is also a very rich woman. I'd look like a fortune hunter—"

No Tragedy

"How old-fashioned of you! And you'd feel like nothing of the sort. The only thing that worries you at present is that you are trying to hide from yourself that you are in love with her."

"I wonder? I don't feel any raging desire for her—that I can swear."

"Y—s simply haven't got that far. The mystery has possessed your mind and your doubts have acted as a censor. But once let yourself go—"

"And suppose she turned me down—which, no doubt, she would do. I'm not hunting for tragedy."

"I've an idea she won't. While you've been talking I've worked out the whole story in my mind. For that matter, I began it last Monday night when I saw you two whispering together. I was in the theatre (at alone—if you noticed! And I watched her face. It was something more than politely interested."

"Oh, she looked the same when she was talking to Dix and Osborne last night at dinner. She is merely a woman of the world who has scores of men in love with her and is young enough to be interested in any young man who doesn't bore her. To say nothing of keeping her hand in. . . . But there is something else. He never credited. "She seems to me to be compounded of strength, force, power. She commands, exudes it. I'm afraid of being afraid of her. I prefer to be stronger than my wife."

"Don't flatter yourself. Women are always stronger than their husbands, unless they are the complete idiot or man-crazy. Neither type would appeal to you. The average woman—all the millions of her—has moral force and strength of character and certain shrewd mental qualities, however unintellectual, that dominates a man every time. This woman has all that and more—a thousand times more."

Mighty Good Thing

"A mighty good thing if she would take you in hand. She'd be the making of you, for you'd learn things about men and women and life—and yourself—that you've never so much as guessed. And then you'd write a play that would set the town on fire. That's all you need. Even if she treated you badly the result would be the same. Life has been much too kind to you, Clavey, and your little disappointments have been so purely romantic that only your facile emotions have played about like amiable puppies on the roof of your passions.

"It's time the lava began to boil and the ill blow off. Your sensitive tract would get a ploughing up and a fertilizing as a natural sequence. Your plays would no longer be mere models of architecture. I am not an amiable altruist. I don't long to see you happy. I'm rather inclined to hate this woman who will end by infatuating you, for of course that would be the last I'd ever see of you. But I'm an artist and I believe that art is really all that is worth living for.

"I want you to do great work, and I want you to be a really great figure in New York instead of a merely notable one."

"You've both taken the conceit out of me and bucked me up. . . . But I want you to meet her, and I don't know how to bring it about. I have an idea that your instinct would get somewhere near the truth."

To Give Party

"Suppose I give a party, and, a day or two before, you ask her casually if she would like to come—or put it to her any way you think best. Nobody calls these days, but I have an idea she would. People of that type rarely renounce the formalities. Then, if I'm really clever, I'll make her think she'd like to see me again and she will be at home when I return her call. Do you think you could work it?"

"It's possible. I've roused her curiosity about you, and you'll plant a few more seeds. Yes, I think she'll come. When will you have it?"

"A week from Saturday."

"Good. You're a brick, Cora. And don't imagine you'll ever get rid of me. If she is unique, as are you. This fireside will always be a magnet."

Miss Dwight merely smiled.

Clavering walked rapidly toward the Dix-Osborne table. He was in no haste to be alone with himself, although he should have been at his desk an hour ago. But it was time Dinwiddie had some news for him.

The Club Was Deserted

The club was deserted as far as he was concerned and he went on to Mr. Dinwiddie's rooms in Forty-eighth Street. There he found his friend in dressing-gown and slippers, one bandaged foot on a stool.

"Gout!" he asked with the callousness of youth. "Wondered why I hadn't heard from you."

"I've tried to get you no less than four times on the telephone."

"When I'm at work I leave orders downstairs to let my telephone alone, and I've been walking a lot."

"Well, sit down and smoke. Standing round makes me nervous. You look nervous yourself. Been working too hard?"

"Yes. Think of taking a run down to Florida."

"Perhaps I'll go with you. But I've something to tell you. That's the reason I called you up——"

"Well?"

"Don't snap my head off. Got a touch of dyspepsia?"

"No, I haven't. If you had to turn out a column a day you'd be nervous too."

"Well, take a vacation——"

"What have you found out?"

"It took me a week to get in touch with Harry Thornhill, but he finally consented to see me. He's lived buried among books for the last twenty years. His wife and two children were killed in a railway collision——"

"What the devil do I care about Harry Thornhill?"

Probably Married

"You're a selfish young beggar, but I would have cared as little at your age. Well—a cousin of his, Maynard Thornhill, did move to Virginia some thirty-five years ago, married, and had a family, then moved on to Paris and remained there until both he and his wife died. Beyond that he could tell me nothing. They weren't on particularly cordial terms and he never looked the family up when he went over. Has Madame Zattiany ever said anything about brothers and sisters?"

"Not a word."

"Probably married and settled in Europe somewhere, or wiped out. You might ask her."

"I'll ask her no more questions."

"Been snubbing you?"

"On the contrary, she's been uncommonly decent. I've rather strung up the last time I was there and asked her so many leading questions that she'd have been justified in showing me out of the house."

"You impertinent young scamp. But manners have changed since my day. What did she tell you?"

"Nothing. I'm as much in the dark as ever. What have you found out about Josef Zattiany?"

"Something, but not quite enough. I met an Austrian, Countess Loyse, at dinner the other night and asked her about the Zattianys. She said the family was a large one with many branches, but she had a vague idea that a Josef Zattiany was killed in the war. Whether he was married or not, she had no idea."

Clavering stood up suddenly and looked down on Mr. Dinwiddie, who was smiling less triumphantly than befitting. "Well?" he asked sharply. "Well?"

"I see you've caught it. It's rather odd, isn't it, that this Austrian lady, who has lived her life in Vienna society, knows nothing apparently of any young and beautiful Countess Zattiany? I didn't give her a hint of the truth, for I certainly shall not be the one to loose the bloodhounds on this charming young woman, whoever she may be. Told her that I revelled in having met a very young and handsome reminder of that name in Europe before the war and wondered what had become of her. . . . But somebody else may let them loose any moment. A good many people are interested in her already."

Has a Right

"Well they can't do anything to her. She's a right to call herself whatever she likes, and she asks no favors. But I'd like to have the Judge Trent and get the truth of him. He knows, damn him!"

"He's lying in a nursing home himself if he's passing off an impostor letting her get possession of Trinity's money and Trinity's Australand Trent. He's a fool about women, but he's the soul of honor, and has one of the keenest legal minds in the state. That she has fooled him is unthinkable."

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

SHOPPERS WEAR OVERSHOES

BY TEMPLE MANNING

THERE is no country in the world where cleanliness holds a higher place in the life of the average individual than Japan.

To the traveler, it is a never-ending source of pleasure and interest to see with what ceaseless energy the Japanese work to keep their homes and public buildings in spick-and-span shape and apple-pie order.

Of course the Japanese housewife is famous the world over for her cleanliness and untiring efforts to keep her house so clean that "you could eat off the floor." This isn't merely a figure of speech. It is absolutely true.

In our country there are many housewives who pride themselves on the immaculate condition of their floors. In other parts of the world floors are kept absolutely free from street dirt. Because, like the Japanese, other people in many countries remove their shoes before entering a house.

But imagine carrying cleanliness to such lengths that an attempt—and a successful one, too—is made to keep up the standard of the average house in a big, bustling department store.

Three hundred years ago, the Mitsukoshi was established. The Mitsukoshi is the busiest department store in Japan. It is the pride of Tokio, where it buzzes all day long with its constant stream of busy shoppers.

Of course, the traveler in Tokio never omits a visit to the Mitsukoshi, and as is customary, starts climbing his way through the crowd at the door.

Then he suddenly realizes that the crowd is not moving—that every one stops at the entrance. He wonders what is happening, when he suddenly finds himself in the line which is formed at the door.

As the traveler moves up, he sees the reason for this congestion of traffic. The prospective shoppers are congregating with the proprietors in an effort to keep the shop clean.

For, as each person comes to the door, he is stopped by an attendant, who bows down and covers his shoes with slippers—made very much like a sugar-bag.

These slippers may be bulky and unattractive hanging over the owner's shoes, but becoming or unbecoming, they keep the matting of the shop clean. And for this reason the many customers who patronize this time-honored institution are kept contented and happy while they go about making their purchases because they are walking on remarkably clean floors—floors that are almost as spotless as those of their own homes.

TELL THESE AT DINNER

A captain and his chief engineer, tired of endlessly debating which the ship could the more easily dispense with, decided to change places for a day. The chief ascended to the bridge and the skipper dived into the engine-room.

After a couple of hours the captain appeared on deck covered with oil and soot.

"Chief!" he called, "you'll have to come down here at once. I can't make her go."

"Of course, you can't," said the chief. "She's ashore."

It was at a musical evening—one of those dreadful functions where all the guests in turn are expected to try their powers as vocal and instrumental musicians. One man got up and sang—or, rather, tried to sing—"My Old Kentucky Home."

He sat down amidst loud applause, when the hostess caught sight of one of her guests weeping quietly in a corner of the room.

Going up to him, she inquired in a sympathetic voice:

"Are you from Kentucky?"

"Oh, no," was the answer. "I'm a musician!"

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

AT THE WATER HOLE

"I'VE never been so thirsty in all my life," I said one day while Bobby and Bunny and I were on a camping trip in Africa. "We've got only enough to get us safely home," I added. "But the way I feel now I could drink a fire-plug dry!"

Just then, off in the distance, we heard the barking of dogs.

I looked at Bunny and Bobby too surprised for words.

"What are dogs doing in this wild place?" I asked. "Do you suppose there are some more hunters around here?"

Before Bunny had time to answer, a great braying—like the braying of a dozen mules—followed the barking of the dogs.

"What kind of a place are we in, boys? You might think by those noises that instead of being in the wilds of Africa, we were back on the farm," I chuckled.

"Foxy Grandpa, please follow me. Perhaps I can find you a drink of water. I'm not sure, but something tells me that I can," he said with his pink eyes twinkling and his whiskers bristling with expectation.

"I'll bet you anything that Bunny's going to lead us to some newcomers in this part of the country. They must have a caravan of pack mules and mongrel dogs.

But that's a new way of traveling here, I must say," I whispered to Bobby as we started after our little four-footed guide, who bounded ahead of us in the direction of the braying and barking, which grew louder as we neared it.

Suddenly Bunny came romping back and whispered:

"Hide behind that clump of bushes there and you'll see the sight of your life! Get your camera ready, Foxy Grandpa!"

Before you could say "Scat!" we were on our knees behind the bushes and my camera was set up.

But in my excitement I nearly forgot to shoot my trusty camera, because—well, I'll tell you what I saw.

Down in a hollow in front of us was a water hole. And there, drinking for all they were worth, were dozens of zebras—and in between drinks they were making such a racket! Would you believe me that some of them—the ones with narrow stripes—for them were two kinds, wide-striped zebras and narrow-striped zebras—were braying like mules. While the broader-striped zebras were barking like big dogs!

"Look, Foxy Grandpa. Notice that the ones with the broad stripes don't drink, while the ones with the narrow stripes are drinking?" Bunny whispered.

And he was right. I don't know why they are so stuck up, unless it is because they think they're more important on account of their broader stripes.

Before they galloped off, I got some fine pictures. And after the zebras left we all went down to the waterhole and filled not only ourselves but our water-bags with the finest cold water you ever tasted in all your life!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman

DEAR MRS SEECKMAN:

A girl friend of mine is to be married this month, and a question arises between her and her bridesmaid. Does the groom pay for the bride's wedding dress, or does the bride pay for it. Would be very glad if you could settle this question for them.

ANXIOUS.

THE bride must pay for her wedding dress. By no means must she allow the groom to pay for it. The groom pays only for the wedding ring and the bouquets of his bride and her attendants.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

I am to be a guest at a hotel wedding. If I wear a semi-evening gown, shall I wear gloves and a hat? What ornament would you suggest for the hair?

I. M.

WITH a semi-evening gown I advise you not to wear a hat or gloves. For such a gown, get a brilliant pin for the hair. This adds a decorative touch and still is not too "dressy" for an informal affair.

SPAGHETTI RECIPES

New England housewives are now given a chance to win six packages of Mueller's delicious spaghetti by sending in a recipe for the best way of cooking appetizing dishes of spaghetti or egg noodles. For each recipe printed here six packages will be sent. Address Spaghetti Editor, Boston American, No. 89 Summer street.

Fish and Spaghetti Pie

One-half cup bread crumbs, 1½ cups cooked fish, 1 cup Mueller's spaghetti, ¾ cup grated cheese, ½ cup melted butter, 1 cup milk, salt and pepper to taste. Remove all skin and bone and break fish into flakes. Break spaghetti into pieces and cook until tender in boiling salted water and drain. Butter fireproof dish, then put in layer of fish, then a little butter, salt, pepper, tablespoon cheese, then a layer of spaghetti. Repeat until dish is full, then cover with bread crumbs on top, then remainder of cheese and butter and pour in milk. Bake in moderate oven 30 minutes.

MRS. KATHRYN KELCOURSE.

No. 1 Woodman street, Irock Island, Quincy, Mass.

Delicious Dish

Boil one package of Mueller's spaghetti in salted water for 20 minutes, or until well done; put in baking dish with 1 can of tomatoes and a little grated cheese. Mix well and add 1 pound of Hamburg steak fried brown in butter. Cover well with cheese and bake until brown.

COSTIVENESS OFTEN POISONS THE SYSTEM

RELIEVE IT WITH DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

For every violation of her laws Nature exacts a penalty; but she also has wisely provided relief, especially for the ailments of the human system. Since constipation is the most common of ailments, Nature endowed certain herbs, seeds, barks and leaves with laxative properties. Early settlers, dependent entirely upon Nature, used the extracts from these plants to relieve and correct constipated conditions.

Over Seventy years ago, an old-fashioned Maine country doctor decided to believe in herb cathartics originated a prescription known as Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative, which since has given relief to many thousands of constipation sufferers.

The herbs used in its preparation are imported and of strictly pure quality; it helps to correct the cause naturally and relieve its attendant evils; it purifies the bowels as it cleanses.

Here is one of the thousands of cases where Dr. True's Elixir has helped. "As you have been a Godsend to me, that is 'a friend in need is a friend indeed.' I will write and tell you about the value of your medicine—Dr. True's Elixir, believe me, it helped me. I eat everything that comes along; no more diet. I even tried raw onions for a test. Is that not long after nine long years of only milk and eggs?"—Mrs. J. E. (Nutley, N. J.)

To have a suitable laxative, one which she knows will prove effective, for easy to take and guaranteed pure, Mrs. Peter Velme of North Charleston, S. C., sent up North. She says: "I have great faith in Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, and have been using it for over ten years. I find for it to my old home at Oxford, Me."

A well-known New Yorker writes: "While visiting in historic old Plymouth (Mass.), my family became acquainted with your Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller. It does all you claim for it, is purely vegetable and relieving insomnia and constipation. Please ship me six large size bottles, for another is in need of it."—Wm. I. Ralph.

Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative, was first a Maine medicine, then New England, now International. 30c.—60c.—$1.20.

Jack Miller, Baseball Star, in Fight For His Life

BATTLING WHITE PLAGUE

By FRED H. WALKER.

San Francisco, July 31.—Stricken at the peak of his career, Jack (Dots) Miller, former star of the old Pittsburgh Pirates and until two weeks ago manager of the pennant winner San Francisco Seals, is today on his way to Lake Saranac, N. Y., where he will begin the long, uphill fight against the white plague.

Miller is among those who, a great many baseball followers will recall, made the baseball world sit up and take notice when he broke into the game with the Pittsburgh Pirates. He was a big, strapping youngster who could hit the ball a mile and was a fair fielder.

Jack Miller

Last year Miller was to Sam Breadon in the deal that sent Rogers Hornsby to the Cardinals. He guided the team to the championship and he never was far from the top. Then he had the misfortune to be stricken by the white plague.

Miller was stricken a few days before the Seals were to leave for Lake Saranac. It is known definitely that the Pirate star has been suffering from the disease for some time, but he kept on working until he could work no longer.

Miller has a hard fight ahead of him. Three years ago he weighed 175 pounds. Today he hasn't more than 125.

New York, July 1. Jack Dempsey and Luis Angel Firpo will meet on Sept. 14 at the Polo Grounds, it was announced today by Tex Rickard, matchmaker. Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, and Firpo, challenger, have been signed to appear in the ring on that date.

"The fight will be held on the night of Sept. 14 and not later," said Rickard. "Dempsey was so anxious to get started that he consented to sign before I chose the date for the match."

FIRPO ASSERTS HE WILL GO THROUGH

Buenos Aires, July 1. Luis Angel Firpo, heavyweight champion of South America, declared today that he would not ask for a postponement of his fight with Jack Dempsey, scheduled for Sept. 14 in New York.

"I would not ask for a postponement even if I were ill," said Firpo. "I will keep my part as I always have done."

FORE RIVER TO STAGE BIG ATHLETIC CARNIVAL AUG. 18

MODIFIED MARATHON FEATURE

By CHARLES E. PARKER

The last big local track meet before the New England track and field stars compete in the New England A. A. U. championships at

Clarence DeMar Bill Kennedy

Worcester, is the annual field day of the Fore River Club, at Quincy Point, August 18.

A fifteen mile road race, four open hand cap events, eight events closed to Fore River employes, a baseball game between two of the leading teams in the Granite City Twilight League, a soccer football tournament, a band concert, dancing and fireworks, are included in the monster program prepared for that occasion and the largest throng of the Summer track season is expected to be on hand when the events get underway.

The feature event will be the fifteen mile road race.

The course starting at the Fore River athletic grounds, Quincy Point, follows Easton avenue, Washington street to Hancock thence to Franklin street, Lincoln avenue, Centre street, Washington street, Willard street to Adams street, East Milton square, Squantum street, Hancock street, Independence avenue, Quincy avenue to the Fore River Club grounds. MARY PHILBIN GETS A GOOD FILM ROLE

MARY PHILBIN gets a new and attractive assignment. She has been selected to play the important role with William Collier, Jr., in "Against the Grain," which work is about to begin. Miss Philbin recently upset film experts by her excellent work in "The Merry Go-Round" and her opportunity to play with Mr. Collier was only one of many that had been offered her. She was born in Chicago, where she went to high school, studied music and dancing and appeared regularly in school and church entertainments.

EULALIE JENSEN threatens to become just as famous as a dancer as an actress. Her divertissements in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," in which she appeared as a gypsy dancer, started her upon a dancing future that may change her screen career. Now she is receiving dancing instructions in Indian dancing from two tribes of real Indians, the Arapahoes and the Bannocks. Before entering the films Miss Jensen was in musical comedy and those days she was always in demand for dancing roles.

BARBARA LA MARR, who is in Rome, Italy, appearing under the direction of George Fitzmaurice in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Eternal City," purchased the complete household effects of General Antenoro, including a petit point drawing room suite and a bed room set and is now the proud possessor of a Barbara La Marr doll. Barbara La Marr is the property of Lucretia Borgia. It will be moved into the new home she recently purchased in Los Angeles.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, it is announced, will shortly begin work on a story showing the life and character of Nathan Hale, the American patriot who died in the cause of liberty. In order to give this photo-play satisfactory presentation six months of research work was necessary.

NOW IT is Ruth Renick who is to be starred in filmland and whose name is to be flashed through the exchanges as one to lure anxious fans to the box office. She has started work on a new production, "Back to Back," and her name will carry just as large type as the title of the play itself. Miss Renick says that according to her present schedule she will have to remain on the west coast for several years.

Ruth Renick.

VICTOR HERBERT

Victor Herbert, noted composer whose musical scores have won him international fame, will personally conduct the augmented orchestra of fifty-two pieces which will inaugurate the beautiful new Cosmopolitan Theatre on Columbus Circle, New York city, on Wednesday, August 1, where Marion Davies in her new super feature photoplay, "Little Old New York," will be the opening attraction. Herbert has composed an original overture to the picture, which he will personally conduct at both matinee and evening performances every day during the run of the photoplay. The orchestra at the new theatre will be composed of men especially selected by the conductor and will be called the Victor Herbert Orchestra.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

A meeting for the purpose of presenting the objects of the newly formed North Shore Real Estate to real estate dealers in the North Shore towns was held at Salem, Monday. Following a luncheon at the Hotel Essex, the officers of the association outlined to the visiting dealers the benefits of an effective organization in influencing public matters affecting real estate interests and the advantages accruing to dealers from membership in the organization. Dealers from Peabody, Beverly, Marblehead, Danvers and Salem were in attendance.

FARMS AND COUNTRY ESTATES

Grace N. Clifford has sold to Bertha Wilson a 35-acre estate with remodeled colonial house at Kingston, Mass.

The sale of the country estate of C. H. Blood, on West Main street, Dover-Foxcroft, Me., to Dr. M. O. Brown of the same town, has been effected.

The property of George and Annie Almer, at No. 81 Portsmouth avenue, Exeter, N. H., has been purchased by Dean J. Thorp.

Joseph H. McCourt has sold his twenty-acre poultry farm, with numerous buildings, in Lakeville, Mass., to the Chas. G. Clapp Co.

Frederick F. Murphy has purchased from Joseph Dean a three-quarter acre plot with dwelling at West Harwich, Mass., which will be occupied as a Summer residence.

Papers have been recorded transferring from Jacob Leborvich to H. Lehner, an attractive estate on Pleasant street, Hingham, comprising twenty-five acres of land, a remodelled colonial mansion, large barn and garage.

All of the above sales were negotiated by the offices of the Chas. G. Clapp Co.

ELKS ON ANNUAL OUTING AT BEACH

Boston Lodge of Elks entertain their ladies at the annual summer outing today at McPeak's Shore Gardens. Most of the party will leave Rowe's Wharf on the 10.15 A. M. boat. They will be joined by members summering at Hull when the boat reaches Pemberton.

Dinner will be served at the Shore Gardens beginning at 1.30 P. M., after which there will be the usual athletic sports with appropriate prizes. Special arrangements have been made for dancing after dinner is served and a vaudeville entertainment will be given by artists from the various theatres in Boston.

Alarm Over President's Condition Causes Weak Market in New York

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

We all know that the purchasing power of America's wage earners is greater today than it was ever at the height of the war-time boom in employment and pay.

But there is never a way a very important reason to the purchasing power of another very large class of our population, namely the owners of stocks, totalling several millions, is apt to undergo a material reduction—duly and often corporations.

Tables specially compiled for the column show that during the last three months no fewer than 18 industrial and utility companies have increased the stockholders' happy by dealing with them more generously dividend-wise.

During the same period twenty-nine railway companies have also made favorable changes.

Probably never before have so many business organizations improved their dividend situations within the brief space of three months.

Towards the end of June there was given in the column a carefully tailed list of 154 industrial companies and twenty railroad companies that had made powerful increased announcements during the preceding two months.

Since then fifteen industrial companies and six railroad companies have added to the list.

* * *

Had pessimism been less fashionable, the newspapers would have been giving great prominence to the industrial dividend record. Not one new paper reader in a hundred, I feel sure, has even once glanced or cared to glance with this subject.

Friday's attack on stock prices, led by the professional bears, was "played up" prominently. Yet the facts and figures here given are of far greater importance significance than the flurry in stock quotations—many of them in speculative issues.

* * *

Your outspoken bear would doubtless dismiss the encouraging dividend measures with a wave of the hand and a sneer that "they represent water that has gone over the dam."

Does any sensible person, however imagine for a moment that conservative, responsible boards of directors would be ashamed to be called on before the New York Curb—would increase dividend payments out stantially unless they knew that the added of depre sion is at hand? At such a time directors usually have scrutinized sources in conserve their cash resources.

* * *

Corporations, to have taken favorable dividend action prior to the end of their color to appear follow, with the action taken in each instance specified.

PRICES HIGHER IN COTTON MARKET

New York, July 31—Cotton futures were steady with prices from 2 to 15 points higher. Sentiment was favorably influenced by higher cables from Liverpool, resulting in short covering. Leading options October sold at 21.27 up 1, December at 21.27 up 15, and January at 21.38 up 11.

MANY NEW LOWS AS PRESSURE GROWS

Liquidation by investors spread until afternoon when President Harding's condition brought about another realization movement during the first half of the session on the New York Stock Exchange. Losses of one to two point were registered in many issues.

Bears seemed to enjoy the position of impression and they sent a number of offerings to 1923 lows. Included in this list were Norfolk & Western, Pacific Mail, Paul preferred, Inspiration Cop, Middle States Oil, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Texas Co, Coca Cola, Missouri Pacific common and preferred.

Moderate was again applied to the oils and Northwestern rails. North Pacific ran off 1¼ points while Great Northern preferred eased 1 point.

Pan American A was driven down nearly two points. Other oil issues in this division were Producers & Refiners, Houston Oil and Garland.

Baldwin, up 2 points at 4 points while DuPont was quoted 2½ points down. Studebaker reacted more than two points.

Large blocs were found in American Can. American Woolen removed Over Producers, Florida Alegre, Real ing and Hupp Motor Weapons.

REPLIES TO QUESTIONS

BALTIMORE & OHIO, to C. E. T., Ashmont—You hold Baltimore & Ohio common through a most trying and unprofitable period, with dividends abandoned. It cost at a time when earnings have improved to the point where the resumption of dividends is being confidently anticipated. The consensus is that the dividend will not exceed 4 per cent. Hence we cannot advise you to sell. The question whether a person who is determined to dispose of Baltimore & Ohio will obtain a higher price when the dividend actually has been declared than he would by selling at present is a matter for personal decision. It is quite possible that you could sell higher shortly before the dividend declaration than a few days after that event. Our point is that the present price of Baltimore & Ohio discounts the dividend, and that it is probably not fully but certainly in a large measure. For these reasons we do not advise purchase. Decided change for Pere Marquette or Philadelphia Company common would appear good for sale of surplus were financial requirements so great.

MISSOURI PACIFIC, to R. E. N., Tremont street—There is no doubt that you would improve your position by exchanging Missouri Pacific general is for some securities better supported by the earning power, but you cannot get the same return without sacrificing some assurance of safety of investment. Missouri Pacific 4s reflect in their price the lack of adequate working capital. Decided gain on stock, on the other hand, has sufficient earning power to keep the stock around par, but there is a business risk involved.

STANDARD OIL OF N. J., to A. T. B., Weston—In Standard Oil of New Jersey preferred you have a high grade short term investment which will not have been obtained at the price you paid if the possibility of redemption at 115 had not existed. We do not know what the company's plans are, but with capital in such demand in the oil industry opportunities to sell at higher prices are unquestionably open.

DENVER & RIO GRANDE, to W. T., Revere—You may as well abandon the idea that there is any real value in the Denver & Rio Grande preferred stock. Two months ago dealers in unlisted securities quoted the stock ¼ bid, offered at ⅝. We are unable to find any recent quotation.

SOME SPECULATIVE, to Mrs. W.—All your bonds and most of your stocks are good to hold. Callahan Zinc, we see no doubt, is a highly speculative. Mother Lode is a speculation, but one of the most promising stocks. Pacific Oil falls into the same class. The earnings are falling off very rapidly and in that year it reported $4.64 a share; in 1922 $3.37 a share. The dividend has also shrunken to $2 a share against 6 a share recently. Ten cents a share in the corresponding period of 1923. The dividend has been cut. If any one thing would take a bear. To the speculative nature of the stock previously mentioned, Utah Copper is a good one but assure you that you are not carrying a risk in these three issues. Your other stocks should be held.

MARY PHILBIN GETS A GOOD FILM ROLE

MARY PHILBIN gets a new and attractive assignment. She has been selected to play the important role with William Collier, Jr., in "Against the Grain," upon which work is about to begin. Miss Philbin recently upset film experts by her excellent work in "The Merry Go-Round" and her opportunity to play with Mr. Collier was only one of many that had been offered her. She was born in Chicago, where she went to high school, studied music and dancing and appeared regularly in school and church entertainments.

EULALIE JENSEN threatens to become just as famous as a dancer as an actress. The divertissements in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," in which she appeared as a gypsy dancer, started her upon a dancing furore that may change her screen career. Now she is receiving dancing instructions in Indian dancing from tribes of real Indians, the Arapahoes and the Bannocks. Before entering the films Miss Jensen was in musical comedy and in those days she was always in demand for dancing roles.

BARBARA LA MARR, who is in Rome, Italy, appearing under the direction of George Fitzmaurice in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Eternal City," purchased the complete household effects of General Antonova, including a petit point drawing room suite and a bed room set said to have been the property of Lucretia Borgia. It will be moved into the new home she recently purchased in Los Angeles.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, it is announced, will shortly begin work on a story showing the life and character of Nathan Hale, the American patriot who died in the cause of liberty. In order to give this photo-play satisfactory presentation six months of research work was necessary.

NOW IT is Ruth Renick who is to be starred in filmland and whose name is to be flashed through the exchanges as one to lure anxious fans to the box offices. She has started work on a new production, "Back to Back," and her name will carry just as large type as the title of the play itself. Miss Renick says that according to her present schedule she will have to remain on the west coast for several years.

Ruth Renick,

COX PROCLAIMS GLOUCESTER FETE

VICTOR HERBERT

Victor Herbert, noted composer whose musical scores have won him international fame, will personally conduct the augmented orchestra of fifty-two players which will inaugurate the beautiful new Cosmopolitan Theatre on Columbus Circle, New York city, on Wednesday, August 1, where Marion Davies in her new super feature photoplay, "Little Old New York," will be the opening attraction. Herbert has composed an original overture to the picture, which he will personally conduct at both matinee and evening performances every day during the run of the photoplay. The orchestra at the new theatre will be composed of men especially selected by the conductor and will be called the Victor Herbert Orchestra.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

A meeting for the purpose of presenting the objects of the newly formed North Shore Real Estate to real estate dealers in the North Shore towns was held at Salem, Monday. Following a luncheon at the Hotel Essex, the officers of the association outlined to the visiting dealers the benefits of an effective organization in influencing public matters affecting real estate interests and the advantages accruing to dealers from membership in the organization. Dealers from Peabody, Beverly, Marblehead, Danvers and Salem were in attendance.

FARMS AND COUNTRY ESTATES

The sale of the country seat of C. H. Blood, on West Main street, Dover-Foxcroft, Me., to Dr. M. O. Brown of the same town, has been effected.

The property of George and Annie Almer, at No. 51 Portsmouth avenue, Exeter, N. H., has been purchased by Joseph J. Thorp.

Joseph H. McCourt has sold his twenty-acre poultry farm, with numerous buildings, in Lakeville, Mass., to the Chas. O. Clapp Co.

Frederick F. Murphy has purchased from Joseph Dean a three-quarter acre plot with dwelling at West Harwich, Mass., which will be occupied as a Summer residence.

Papers have been recorded transferring from Jacob Lebowich to H. Lehner, an attractive estate on Pleasant street, Hingham, comprising twenty-five acres of land, a remodelled colonial mansion, large barn and garage.

All of the shore sales were negotiated by the offices of the Chas. O. Clapp Co.

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—July 31, 1923

Total length of the 2,447 paved streets in Boston, February 1, 1922, was 606.33 miles, total area 11,459,009 square yards.

'We Must Have Wide-Awake Intelligent Opinion'

Speaking at East Northfield, Rev. Dr. Arthur E. Holt, Social Service Secretary of the Congregational Educational Society, made a statement of considerable interest to the community and to the newspapers at the Northfield conference on Religious Education. Dr. Holt is teaching some classes in social work in the churches and on Christian principles.

In the course of one of his lectures he said: "We must have wide-awake intelligent opinion all over the country." He spoke of the danger of what he called "Mob-mindedness," which he explained was the disposition of people in masses to follow the headlines and the reports in our newspapers blindly and thoughtlessly.

If that is what Dr. Holt really means then we agree with him that there is serious danger to our democratic republic in the disposition which we recognize and which we lament with those who see this dangerous tendency.

There is too much disposition on the part of our people to take their information, like their breakfast, pre-digested for them by the newspaper headlines.

A headline might give a twist and a slant to the news in the column below which may be entirely unjustified by the substance of the printed matter in that column and yet which the lazy reader will not detect. Too often our readers read only the headlines. Are you going to blame the newspapers for that?

Newspaper editors often find that a very brief resume of the most important things is all that the general public will read. This is the reason why our trusts and monopolies are able to raise the cost of living; why our courts are usurping legislative power; why our railroads are contributing their outrageous share to the increasing cost of living and are corrupting our public life.

People do not think for themselves. Our schools have greatly failed to teach independent thinking. Some of them under plutocratic domination like Amherst, prohibit it even when an exceptional president like Meiklejohn tries to stimulate it.

Free thinking is too dangerous for the dangerous forces of organized wealth and privilege in this country to permit its encouragement in our privately endowed colleges. The answer is State universities which will give a higher percentage of our youth a college education and which will not be governed by a board of trustees who do not want the students to think for themselves, but to be taught that

He may take who has the power
And he may keep who can.

Even our elementary public schools have failed in this respect, but the failure has not been deliberate. It is more difficult to teach this art or to help form this habit with children than with the adolescent, and it takes a much higher grade of teacher. Unfortunately our teachers have gone through colleges where it is not encouraged and do not often appreciate its importance.

But it is more important than any other thing in the public school curriculum and must be taught.

Safe Place for Savings

In these days of bucketshop exposures and frequent failures of brokerage houses, the small investor is asking himself: "What shall I do with my money; who is a safe custodian for it?"

The small saver can find no safer custodian than the mutual savings bank.

Small savers, it is estimated, are swindled out of a thousand million dollars yearly by bucketshops and stock swindling concerns centred in New York alone.

In Massachusetts, we do not know what the loss is, but it must be enormous.

If that thousand million dollars were annually put into savings banks, at 4½ per cent., it would yield a return of forty-five million dollars per year to thousands of American men and women who now have nothing but bitterness and disappointment as dividends upon their hard-won savings.

Two Liquor Cases

Patrolman Daniel J. Welby, attached to Captain Reardon's liquor squad, arrested a woman named Pasqualina Costa for illegally selling liquor in North street. While taking her to the station he was attacked by her husband and her brother. The officer was badly damaged, but with the assistance of other officers who arrived in time, all three were taken to the station and locked up.

We shall be interested to know the outcome of this alleged illegal sale of liquor and of the assault upon the officer. We wonder whether or not the judge before whom the parties are arraigned if he finds them guilty, will send them to jail. We hope those who are interested in getting jail sentences for this sort of culprit will watch the case.

On the same day, not a great distance away, a man named Joseph Lee, who says he belongs at No. 28 Morrill street, Dorchester, was arrested bringing a five-gallon can of liquor to a near-beer saloon on C and Fourth streets, South Boston. It would be well for the women who are interested in jail sentences to watch the disposition of this case, also.

England Does It

But We, It Seems, Are Unfit

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company

The words "government" and "people" ought to mean the same thing. The English government, or people, made six million pounds profit on its postoffice. Also made one million pounds profit on telephone owned by the people. It lost nominally a million and a half pounds on the government telegraph lines.

The net profit was five million five hundred thousand pounds. But that was only part of it. In England the charges for telegrams are less than half the rates in America. The same rate takes a telegram anywhere in the British islands. Therefore, the PEOPLE save a great deal more than the GOVERNMENT apparently made. They say our government is not honest enough or able enough to manage its telegraph and telephone lines, not much of a compliment to the U. S. A. But that will change some day.

NAMES NEW BABE IN COURT

CHICAGO, July 31.—While Hersk Tabak was in court to get his final naturalization papers he received word that his wife had presented him with their fourth child. Hurriedly Tabak notified the court and asked to have his papers corrected to include the latest arrival.

"You'll have to give the child's name or he won't be a citizen," the court informed him.

Unwilling to delay longer receipt of his papers," Tabak braved the probable displeasure of his wife and named the child after the clerk.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

Her Canine Child

Editor, Boston American:

Recently a woman walked into the confectionery store where I work and called for an ice cream cone for her dog. The dog refused to eat it and the woman said: "Now eat it or mamma won't like you." The dog licked it once and then again refused to eat it, whereupon the woman ate it. When she left, she addressed the dog as follows: "Now turn around and tell the lady you have not been a nice gentleman." Is there any need for the gathering mob to wait until sunrise?

M. M.

Why Not?

Editor, Boston American:

If the United States needs a twelve-mile limit sea-coast, why ask the consent of eastern hemisphere countries? Why not settle it with western hemisphere countries? They are all free independent, excepting Canada. The sea is free, belongs to no country. Why not settle our own affairs on this hemisphere in our own way to suit ourselves? If European seaboard countries needed a twelve-mile limit seacoast they would establish it.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls. No Names Are Published.

Mother and Baby in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am stopping at my sister's in Beverly, but she is unable to help me, as she finds it hard to make both ends meet for her own family. My husband passed away a month ago and left me with a little baby girl just six months old. I find it hard to get a job with such a little baby, and I wish some of the readers of the Helping Hand would help me get a job where I can have my baby and make money enough to clothe myself and baby and for other little things we might need.

G. E. W.

Just Out of Hospital

Editor Helping Hand:

I wonder if I might receive a little help? I am just out of the hospital after undergoing a serious surgical operation, and I am in need. I have three children, two boys, twelve and ten, and a girl, six. The doctor says I cannot go to work for at least a year, but I could get strong. I would go this Winter. My husband is making only seventeen dollars a week, his own work having shut down. I wonder if someone has a good warm dress, size 36 or 38, for me?

MRS. M. N.

Offer from Invalid

Editor Helping Hand:

I thought that I would have to call for aid on your column a few weeks ago, as I have formulas for making tooth powder and corn remover, which I thought I would have to offer for sale to readers of your paper to pay my bills, as I have been sick eleven weeks with anemia and nervous exhaustion. I am now gaining slowly and am going to try canvassing to earn money to pay my bills and support my wife and child. While I am canvassing, I shall gather up what clothing I can get and send to some of those who make appeals in your column. If you will send me the names of the following I will send them a few things that we can get along without. Mrs. S. B., of South Dakota; Mrs. M. A. W., Mrs. D. H. Mrs. W. A. C. and M. E. If I am successful in getting clothes I will write for more names.

Thank you. The names you request have been sent you. Your idea is a good one.

Needs Working Suit

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a married man and a war veteran. I have been out of work for four weeks and with only one suit to my back. I wonder if you could give me the address of some one who has a man's cast-off suit, size 40, that I may wear to work. I expect to go to work tomorrow, and would be willing to pay for suit and anything else that could be worn by a man five feet seven inches in height, or more, size 8 or 8½.

W. K.

Wants Typewriter

Editor Helping Hand:

With the exception of a little piano playing, my only enjoyment is in the use of the typewriter. I am blind, and feel very strongly the necessity of owning a writer. I have certainly done my best to get one. I got a machine, paying ten dollars down, but being unable to secure any kind of a position, I fell through when the next amount was due. I did all in my power to try to get a position. I now find time dragging terribly on my hands.

T. J. T.

Aged Crippled Woman

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a lady seventy years old and crippled. I live with a sister who works in a laundry, but she is so old also that she is unable to earn much, so I am very short of clothing. Is there anyone who has clothing of large size—45 to 50—they would give me?

M. E.

Money for Mrs. H. S.

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed please find check for $5 for Mrs. H. S., the saleslady who is just out of the hospital.

R. W. T.

Check is being forwarded her. It will help her a lot, I know. Many thanks.

Editor Helping Hand:

Please give the small sum enclosed to "A. B." for the two little orphans.

M. A. B.

Many thanks. The one dollar is being forwarded to them.

For Hungry Children

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed please find one dollar for the mother with five children who are hungry, as the mother of them stated in your paper on July 26, signed Mrs. S. D. W. I have no clothes to give, but think she might be able to buy a little for the money.

MRS. E. S. S.

Many thanks. It will help a lot. It is being forwarded her.

$3 for Mrs. J. B. W.

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed please find three dollars, which you will kindly send to Mrs. J. B. W., and oblige.

C. S. W.

Many thanks. It is being forwarded her, and will help a lot.

Others Supplied

The editor wishes to express his sincere thanks to the following people for their generous offers of help to those in need. They have been sent the addresses requested.

ALL THE BONEHEADS ARE'NT FOUND IN MONGOLIA

By Herbert Kaufman

ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS, digging around in the pleistocene bone pits of Mongolia, cabled that he has found complete skeletons of thirty-foot lizards which died five centuries ago, and is shipping to the Museum of Natural History one perfectly preserved skull of a rhinoceros three million years ago.

Comparison between this obdurate chunk of bone and the craniums of anthracite operators, whose properties are the carbonized forests and jungles through which such monsters once played and preyed, will likely establish a pronounced similarity of structure.

Both are noted for shortsightedness and evince a common disregard of consequences.

Nothing less than a knockdown will swerve either from stubborn determinations, and it looks as though the country will have to use the big stick or burn fence palings next Winter, too.

Bituminous interests now join the hard-coal men in resisting the check-off system. The unions will strike if they don't get it. Labor captains want union dues deducted from pay envelopes. Corporation officials refuse to become collection agents for President Lewis' war chest.

We'll have a Ruhr of our own if the row isn't settled.

Fuel scarcity is again inevitable unless President Harding can convince the barons that recommended Federal control of the coal fields is the alternative of a deadlock.

Republican hopes will go up in smoke if public necessity doesn't compel protection.

They Call It "Stabilization"

La Follette will find more than the farm bloes behind him when he introduces promised regulation of oil companies.

Henry Ford alone furnishes two million supporters annually for that sort of legislation.

Every filling station is a campaign platform. The automobile is a political machine, influencing millions of votes, as Congress will gradually learn.

The law of supply and demand must rule gasoline markets as well as grain pits. Ranches properly protests at dollar wheat while favored folk are left free to profiteer as they please.

Suspension of petroleum production, with secret intent to hold prices at peak levels, is under discussion at Chicago.

They call it "stabilization," but "conspiracy in restraint of trade" under any other name is just the same.

Sherman Act watchdogs are already barking at the conference. The Department of Justice has the needed legal fangs—let them be used.

Anarchy Waves a New Flag

Cuno also shows his teeth. Machine guns, heavy artillery, and armored tanks are ready for advertised Communist riots at Halle, Leipsic, Munich and Bremen.

Anarchy has replaced the Red banners of Moscow with five million mark notes. Empty pockets and larders are more persuasive revolutionists than haranguing orators.

Berlin is in desperate plight. Butter, eggs and potatoes are gone. Old stocks have been consumed, and it's too early for new crops.

Dealers, bewildered by five thousand per cent. daily currency shrinkages, board supplies, and invite further mob retaliation.

And Herr Hohenzollern smirks at Doorn, parades in his regal paraphernalia, and actually believes that the people he thus betrayed are about to call him back to Potsdam.

Another human with rhinoceros forebears.

Not So Red as Painted

It always makes a difference whose bull is gored. I. W. W. chiefs got a dose of their own prescription and make a wry face as they swallow it.

Striking longshoremen fall upon radical headquarters at Hoboken and smash things generally. Whereupon an appeal is made to Governor Silzer for the arrest and prosecution of Shipping Board officials for instigating violence. Bolshevism's local exponents ask him "to prove that this is a democratic government."

The gods make ridiculous as well as mad those whom they intend to destroy.

Boris Bekhmeteff, Kerensky's ambassador to the United States, must chuckle as he reads of the incident. He's not concerned at Russia's future. The Institute of Politics at Williamstown is told that Lenine and Trotzky's regime is a fast passing phase.

The Soviet can't drive an army cross the border. Peasant soldiers will perish in defence of their lands, but won't support a campaign of aggression. European events corroborate this contention. Moujik forces, you will remember, wouldn't even proceed against Poland.

From the Dardanelles to Kansas

The Dardanelles open to our fleet. All the privileges accorded signers of the Lausanne Treaty are granted us without joining the Muddle Club. World Court advocates and League of Nations fanatics will please put the announcement in their pipes and coke over it.

William Allen White sends warning that the Middle West is ghost-dancing and after Harding's scalp.

In his opinion, Republicans are in for "an awful licking," mainly because transportation costs don't vary with food fluctuations. He predicts a very emotional campaign, and depend upon it, coal, oil, sugar and foreign issues won't tend to reduce its emotional aspect.

Universally disordered times aren't propitious for second terms. Tax-peeved, social restless nations will continue to change doctors until conditions improve.

White House bees may be buzzing in Henry Ford's bonnet, but they haven't yet totally possessed the busiest mental hive on earth.

His latest stunt is the use of wood scraps from body-building plants for the manufacture of bookbinders' board—another refuse heap turned into a gold mine.

The mainsprings of Ford's success are thrift and efficiency, two subjects on which farmers are signally ignorant.

Rural banks wouldn't be stuffed with mortgages if by-products weren't scandalously disregarded; if still good machinery were oftener repaired than replaced, and implements left to rust and rot in the open were properly housed. The champion waster runs a plow.
